MAYOR IN WAR ON FIRE HEAD

MAYOR MAY OUST FIRE HEAD

The political friends of Mayor Fitzgerald expressed their indignation at City Hall and elsewhere to-day because of the action of Acting Mayor Collins and Fire Commissioner Daly in taking steps to appoint fifty new firemen during the absence of the Mayor in Europe.

Commissioner Daly's action in asking for the firemen was denounced by the Mayor's friends as an act of treachery to the man who gave him his job.

Acting Mayor Collins was accused of being disloyal to the Mayor and of having gone much further than he had any right to go in preparing an order for the consideration of the City Council at Monday evening's meeting, asking for the money with which to pay the salaries of the fifty new men to be placed on the fire-fighting force.

The liveliest kind of a row has been stirred up and it was believed that it would hasten the return of the Mayor from abroad.

May "Go Upon Carpet."

The Mayor's friends said unhesitatingly that as soon as the Mayor returned that he would have Commissioner Daly "on the carpet" for an explanation of his act in asking for the firemen when the Mayor had told him that he couldn't have them.

One of Mayor Fitzgerald's friends said to-day:

"You may rely on this that one of the first things that Mayor Fitzgerald will do when he returns from Europe will be to summon Fire Commissioner Daly and he'll ask for the Fire Commissioner's resignation. Daly knows he had no right to go to Acting Mayor Collins and ask for fifty new firemen.

"Daly and Mayor Fitzgerald had talked that matter over and the Mayor told him that he could not have the men. That should have settled the matter, at least until the return of the Mayor."

The legality of Acting Mayor Collins's power to appoint fifty new men or to ask for an appropriation for their salary is questioned in municipal circles. While Corporation Counsel Babson has not given an official statement about the legality of the matter he has been unofficially quoted as saying that it is not in the province of the Acting Mayor to do such a thing, in view of the fact that the matter can wait for the arrival home of the Mayor.

Debate Legality of Action.

Then again the feeling is manifest at City Hall that City Auditor Mitchell will have to act in accordance with the decision of Corporation Counsel Babson in the matter. Mitchell will have to be satisfied that the order to be presented at Monday's meeting is legal.

A petition is being prepared by Dorchester citizens, asking Acting Mayor Collins to place another fire engine at Grove Hall.

The demand by Dorchester citizens for more fire protection follows the disastrous Normandy street fire at which several dwellings were consumed.

A meeting in front of the fire ruins was held under auspices of the Dorchester "Boosters' Club," composed of real estate men. John M. Moore said that they were not gathered to "knock" the fire department, but to demand more fire protection. Speakers resented a statement quoted of Edward G. Richardson, an assessor, that Dorchester buildings were like tinder boxes. F. G. Powell and W. J. Paul denied this.

$100,000 LEFT BY PORTER WHO SAVED AND INVESTED TIPS

ALEXANDRIA BAY, July 15.—In the death of A. J. Berry, colored, a porter for thirty-five years at the Thousand Island House, Alexandria Bay, a familiar figure in this region passed away. Berry was strong in voice and size, making his voice easily heard above the score of other porters that throng the dock with the arrival of each steamer. Berry left an estate of $100,000 which he had obtained by saving his tips and investing them.

PARIS, July 15.—John W. Gates had a bad night, but rallied this morning, and at noon his condition was about the same as it has been generally for two or three days. Mrs. Gates and their son, Charles G. Gates, are constantly in attendance, and both are quite exhausted by their anxious watch.

HARBOR BILL GETS BIG BOOM

Tremendous interest and high approval of the $9,000,000 Boston harbor improvement bill was shown by over fifty solid business men of Boston who attended a hearing before the House Committee on Ways and Means at the State House.

Among the striking indorsements of this big improvement measure was the flat statement by Henry C. Long, the Boston attorney and long-time advocate of harbor improvements, who said that the proposed $9,000,000 appropriation would come back to the State ten-fold. Mr. Long declared that passage of the harbor bill will ultimately result in a cut in the State tax.

The improvement bill, for which Senator Brown of Medford is sponsor, has already been passed by the Senate. It seems assured of a unanimous favorable report by the House Committee on Ways and Means. At the hearing no members of the committee displayed opposition to it nor did any of the speakers.

Among the business men who favored the bill were Henry C. Loring, Acting Mayor Collins, President Smith of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Senator Brown of Medford, ex-Congressman William S. McNary, Charles H. Jones, president New England Shoe & Leather Association; Colonel Sidney O. Bigney of Attleboro, President John J. Martin of the Real Estate Exchange and Rear Admiral Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

Henry C. Long said of the bill:

"Do not think for a minute that, in passing this bill, you are appropriating $9,000,000. You are simply giving the State's credit to a proposition which will bring back into Massachusetts in increased commerce and business as a whole ten times $9,000,000 in a comparatively short time. This bill will not increase the State tax. Every dollar of the $9,000,000 will bring back $10 in tax-bearing property into Massachusetts. The result, of course, will be the lightening of the tax burden, not only of Boston, but also of the whole Commonwealth."

C. W. TINDELL HELD FOR BROKERAGE THEFT

NEW YORK, July 15.—Declaring he was almost blind from a nervous disease brought on by worry, Charles W. Tindell, formerly cashier of the New York branch of the Boston brokerage firm of Austin, Baldwin & Co., was arraigned before Magistrate Hermann in Tombs Police Court and held without bail for extradition. After a three-year search following his disappearance with $10,000 of the firm's funds, Tindell, together with his wife and child, was located living with his brother-in-law at No. 2383 Webster avenue. He was lured out of the house by a fictitious message and arrested.

Mr. Moss declared to-day that the committee will sift to the bottom the charges against the pure food expert and intimated that sensational revelations are expected.

FATAL WRECK IN NEW YORK

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 15.—Erie train No. 15, west bound express from New York to Chicago, struck a pusher engine at Portage on the Buffalo division of the road at 5:25 a. m. to-day. The engine of the express was derailed and rolled over a high embankment, killing the engineer, William Oliver, of Buffalo, and seriously, if not fatally, injuring the fireman. The baggage master and express messenger were also seriously injured. No passengers were hurt, although several were severely shaken up and are suffering from shock and fright.

BIG SWORDFISH FIGHT DORYMEN

The little auxiliary schooner Elizabeth J. Brenner, Captain H. O. Hillman, arrived from George's Shoals and landed 121 swordfish at T wharf that weighed 200 pounds each, dressed. It was the biggest haul of sword fish this year, and for a six days' fishing trip the crew divided $1,004, the fish bringing seven cents a pound.

Besides demonstrating that swordfish are more plentiful than ever before, the crew brought back tales of thrilling fights with the fish that proved them to be fighters from th time they were harpooned from the pulpit of the little fishing schooner.

NEW CLEW IN LAKE MYSTERY

A clew that may help in clearing the mystery that surrounds the death by drowning of Miss Elsie Carroll, the beautiful seventeen-year-old Newton girl who lost her life in Crystal Lake, Wednesday, was discovered to-day by an AMERICAN reporter, which would strengthen the theory that the girl went for a ride with a young man, and that the tragedy took place while she was in his company.

A boy who lives near the lake said to-day that about the time the girl's body was found on Thursday afternoon a man whom he did not know asked him to go into the lake and get his hat. The hat floated in the water near where the body was discovered. The boy got the hat and gave it to the man, who disappeared.

"I never saw the man before," the boy said. "He said that he would give me a dime if I got the hat, but he didn't give me the dime. The hat was soft felt."

In Girl's Company at the Time?

It was suggested by those who have been investigating the mystery that the man might have been in company with Miss Carroll on the lake when she was drowned, and that he lost his hat at that time.

The relatives and friends of the dead girl were more convinced to-day than ever that she did not commit suicide. They discussed this phase of the case quietly after the simple funeral service which was held at 10:30 o'clock at the undertaker's rooms of Eugene W. Pratt, No. 1,235 Centre street, Newton Centre.

The funeral was private. The Rev. Edward M. Noyes, pastor of the Newton Centre Congregational Church, which Miss Carroll attended, officiated. The service was simple, consisting of a Bible reading and

SHERMAN TELLS WHEN HE REACHES LIMIT

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The precise limitations of a parliamentarian in presiding over a great deliberative body are explained by Vice-President Sherman. Senators Bristow and Smoot were having a rapid-fire exchange standing close together and speaking in low tones. The point of order was raised by Senator Hitchcock that he could not hear a word either of the Senators was saying. "The chair can pass upon any point of order raised," said Mr. Sherman, "except the limitations of a Senator's voice and the hearing capacity of a Senator's ears."

REVERE PEOPLE SCORE METHODS

"Give the people better bathing accommodations down at Revere Beach," is the cry that is being sent broadcast by the thousands that during the past few weeks have been obliged to stand out in the broiling sun for two and three hours at the State bathhouse waiting turn for a bathing suit and then had to give up their sea bath for the lack of accommodations.

People who have been in business and have lived for years in the Summer at Revere Beach are outspoken in condemning the system now in vogue at the bathhouse run by the Commonwealth.

Some go as far as demanding that some change be made in the management. Others seem to feel that an addition to the present bathhouse should be made or another smaller bathouse be built farther up the beach toward Crescent Beach.

Add Another Floor.

Charles Brown of Sleeper's restaurant on the boulevard, one of the pioneers on Revere Beach and conservative, had this to say to the AMERICAN: "I have been down here in the old days when bathhouses were scattered all along the beach and we don't want to go back to those days. It is a cussed shame, however, to have people stand two and three hours in the sun waiting for bathing suits and then be refused for the lack of accommodations.

"I don't know how the problem can be handled, but something should be done on Sundays and in an extremely hot spell. Of course to be fair we have got to take into consideration the fact that the weather of the last two weeks has been unusual and this caused the bathhouse people the trouble.

"The bathing proposition down here is being handled pretty well and I doubt under the present condition of things if we will be able to get any more money from the State. All the rooms in the bathhouse, as I understand, are open at the top. Now couldn't another floor be added with more rooms.

"Why, people come down here in the morning during hot weather; hire a suit for twenty-five cents; hang up their own clothes and wear the State's for a day around on the beach. This is the unfair part of it. Somebody else may be waiting and can't get a suit. Limit the hours and charge double price for all day and I believe it would get around much of this trouble. Why I have had people come into this hotel and tell me that they had been in a bathing suit for eight hours; think of it! I wouldn't stand in line for four hours waiting for one of those people to come in; no sir, not for all the bathing there is down here."

Suggests "No Suit" Sign.

Many along the boulevard and in the vicinity of the bath house take the same stand that Mr. Brown takes; that something should be done to meet the rush, but what that something is they don't care to say.

Henry W. Wheeler, an ice cream man, takes a whack at the State management of the bathhouse. He has this to say: "Something is wrong in the way they run things at the bathhouse. There is no need of keeping a hundred or more people in line all day. If they haven't any suits, hang out a sign and say so. There should be better accommodations and still, the bigger the bath-house, the more money it will take to run it and then if there is no rush, such as we have just had, the State will be the loser. It was certainly the worst I ever saw, these last two weeks.

"Why, people begged for suits or a wet suit; anything in order to get into the water, and after spending the day in a line down a hot dusty street; they had to go home without a bath. This proposition is some stunt to handle with fairness to all and I don't know just where they could begin where they should stop."

William Richmond, who keeps a little lemonade stand, is another one who has had long experience on the beach and who comes forward with a demand for something different in the way of handling a rush.

Need Another House.

"I don't know as we will ever see such a crowd looking for bathing accommodations again," said Mr. Richmond, "but they ought to be ready. What they need down here is another big bathhouse and this has been agitated for some time but nothing has come of it. I am not so sure that the leasing of land for public bathhouses other than the State would be a good thing. I don't think it would be. The matter is handled pretty well, except in a rush, and then something ought to be ready for this contingency."

Max Stern, another ice cream and popcorn merchant, said: "Give the people a chance to get in bathing without keeping them in line and in the hot sun for two or three hours. It has been pretty bad down here duing the hot weather, but now it is all right."

Henry W. Russell, hotel man and restaurant keeper on the boulevard, is another one of the business men who thinks that something ought to be done.

In talking to the AMERICAN, Mr. Russell said: "I will sign a petition if it is a good one for better accommodations. I hardly know how they could go about it to get the problem solved, as it is quite a proposition to know how to handle a crowd and when the rush is coming. Days and days, including Sundays, I have seen little or no business here in the bathing line and then comes a hot spell with a big rush. The State is not in a money-making scheme; if it was it might be different, but the facilities would be worse. Perhaps agitation will bring out the solution. I would like to see a little improvement on rush days for the people's sake."

J. A. Hadge, proprietor of the Derby Race Spa, spoke in favor of a change in the conditions. He said: "The people are right when they want a change. If the management would only make preparations for the bathing season instead of waiting until the rush is at their door, it would be better. When you have several thousand all clamoring for something you haven't got, it means trouble and that in my mind is just what is happening in the hot weather and on Sundays.

BELIEVE MARS WILL RECOVER

ERIE, Pa., July 15.—After raving in delirium all night in his previous flights through the air, "Bud" Mars, the American aviator, who returned from a tour of the world only to receive serious injuries here yesterday afternoon when he was precipitated in his biplane from a height of 300 feet, recovered consciousness to-day at the Hamot Hospital, and the physicians there now believe that he will recover. Mrs. Mars witnessed the accident.

Mars had made a successful flight and was in the air for the second time when the accident occurred. Several thousand spectators were watching him.

He circled the field a number of times at a height of several hundred feet. Suddenly the machine made a dip downward and Mars was seen to jerk at something in an effort to regain control of it.

Wife Faints on Field.

It was a futile attempt, however, and an instant later the biplane struck the ground. The machine was completely wrecked and Mars lay under it. He was covered with blood and at first it was believed he was dead. His wife collapsed on the field.

J. C. ("Bud") Mars is one of the youngest of American flyers. He is a member of the Curtiss camp. He is a short man, of slight build, and weighed 105 pounds. Mars used a small, four-cylinder, 25 horsepower motor in his machine. Handicapped by a scarcity of power he did not distinguish himself at the early part of his career, although his grit and resourcefulness were wonderful.

Mars has had a varied career. At the age of fifteen years he learned parachute jumping under the tutelage of Captain Baldwin. Then he turned circus rider and turned somersaults on a horse's back. But this was not exciting enough for Mars. So he took to lion taming.

Was Once a Balloonist.

One day the circus management was distressed about the sudden death of one of their star performers. It was the duty of this man to make a high dive into a shallow pool of water. Mars took his place. Then he drifted back to the balloon business, and finally became attached to the Curtiss camp. This was his first aeroplane experience.

SHOE MEN INVITED TO BROCKTON PLANT

BROCKTON, July 15.—The business associates of the Churchill & Alden Company, shoe manufacturers, are congratulating them on their escape from serious damage in a dangerous fire which raged here. Aside from an outside scorching and a little water damage, their plant escaped harm, and the concern will be able to fill all orders. The Churchill & Alden Company invite all the shoe dealers who are attending the fair in the Mechanics Building in Boston, or are in this section of the country because of the celebration of "Shoe and Leather Week," to come out and inspect their model factory, which is in good working shape, although it was imperilled by flames when next-door buildings were destroyed. The hundreds of employes left their posts when the fire grew hot, but nobody was hurt. The flames destroyed the carriage building and most of the big J. C. Keith stables on Main street, in the Campello section. The fire damage is estimated to-day at about $20,000.

"SOLOMON" SETTLES GOOSE'S OWNERSHIP

WILKESBARRE, July 15.—A dispute over the ownership of a goose was settled to-day by Alderman John F. Donahue, who is famous locally for his common-sense adjustments of lawsuits. Mrs. Alice Kreiger charged Mrs. Louis Pelinus with the theft of a goose. Mrs. Pelinus claimed the goose had belonged to her ever since it was hatched. "Well," said the Alderman, "each of you women will go home, will get the gander of your flock and each bring one here. Then let the goose choose to which flock she belongs. If this fails, then the defendant is sentenced to take the goose home, kill it, divide it in half and give one half to the prosecutrix."

SWISS GUIDES FAIL TO FIND BOSTON MAN

GENEVA, Switzerland, July 15.—A score of guides and others are searching in the mountains for Homer Tidman of Boston, who set out several days ago, unaccompanied, to climb the Dent-Du-Midi, a lofty peak in the Alps, on the frontiers of Valais and Savoy. The missing youth's mother is distracted, for the only trace of her son so far discovered is his name carved on a mountain hut. It is feared young Tidman has fallen over a precipice.

Josephine Joy Tells More of Gay Life in Boston

Broker Who Showered Money on Her and Then, Tired, Gave $25,000 After Seeing Lawyers.

Mrs. Almer V. Sturtevant, the young actress known on the stage as Josephine Joy, and whose adventures with some lively Boston men of wealth are now furnishing Back Bay clubs and tea tables with unexpected Summer season gossip, has suddenly fled from her sister's home at Passaic Park, N. J., according to dispatches to-day from New York.

This enterprising young woman (she is only twenty-four years old) jumped into the limelight by soliciting aid from Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, the government's witness in the Allen-Collins alleged smuggling case. She says she "figured Mrs. Jenkins would help a sister in distress."

As it turned out, Mrs. Jenkins consented to see Josephine Joy, but simply laughed at her appeals. The meeting between Josephine Joy and Mrs. Jenkins is merely incidental, so far as Boston is concerned, to the interesting career of the young actress up to the time she first sought Mrs. Jenkins's acquaintance. From the meeting with Mrs. Jenkins there has developed an amazing story of a talented and attractive girl who became identified in many ways with Boston people and places.

Two photographs of Mrs. Almer V. Sturtevant, known on the stage as Josephine Joy, who tells of money lavished on her by a Boston man and of her attempts to borrow from Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins.

"Angel" For Vaudeville Skit.

Mrs. Sturtevant's maiden name was Miss Josephine Joyce. It was by that name that she was known at the New England Conservatory of Music. When she went on the stage the name "Josephine Joy" was a natural adaptation. She is now the wife of Almer F. Strutevant, who is employed in a New York trust company.

Mr. Sturtevant is now said to have a suit pending against Willis Betts Sterling, a wealthy resident of Erie, Pa., for alleged alienation of Mrs. Sturtevant's affections. According to Mrs. Sturtevant, it was Sterling who assisted in her musical education at the Conservatory. She is also said to have been aided by the late C. H. Bond of this city, who was a patron of struggling musical aspirants.

Sterling also, according to Mrs. Sturtevant, was the "angel" for a production of an elaborate vaudeville sketch which was "tried out" at Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York city. The sketch, entitled "Spirit Land," was a failure.

There was also a well-known Boston banker, one of the active financial men of the city to-day, who was intimately acquainted with "Josephine Joy." He did not know she was married. It was this banker who was muleted of $25,000, according to Mrs. Sturtevant, under pressure of threat that a breach of promise suit would be filed against him.

Mrs. Sturtevant, speaking of her personal history, and especially of Boston adventures, has said:

Obtained Money in Boston.

"I was born in England, and my mother's name was Briggs. She married Mr. Gibbons and went to Springfield to live. Some of the prominent people took an interest in me because of my voice, and through them it was arranged that I should go to the Boston Conservatory. My expenses there were paid by a Boston broker, by Mr. Bond and Mr. Sterling, although I never met Mr. Sterling until last year, when the affair on which my suit against him is based happened in Erie and Buffalo.

"After I went on the stage and while I was out of an engagement I needed money, and I asked the Boston man for it. He would not give it to me in a public place, so I took a room in the Hotel Essex in Boston, and he came there and gave me $500. I obtained other sums from him from time to time, but he grew tired of it, and one day when I sent a note to him while he was in a directors' meeting he sent back a refusal. I saw him as soon as possible and told him I must have more money, but he said he would give me no more. I engaged a lawyer and prepared to sue him, but he paid me $25,000. The suit was never filed."

Josephine Joyce, as she was known at the New England Conservatory about two years ago, was a popular and very pretty girl. She gained a reputation there of being very well able to manage her own affairs.

"Josephine was quite discreet," is the description given of the young actress by a Bostonan who knew her then.

On Stage in Boston.

Soon after leaving the Conservatory the girl went on the stage. She did, as she has said, become understudy for Fritzi Scheff. She says that Fritzi Scheff was jealous of her and caused Charles B. Dillingham, producer of the schow, to transfer her to "The Red Mill," another Dillingham production.

Last season A. H. Wood offered her a leading role in "The Girl in the Taxi," but she declined, seeming uncommonly prosperous. She had an automobile and was rather a puzzle to Broadway.

After the failure of "Spirit Land" at Keith & Proctor's in New York, Josephine Joy eventually went back to her original vaudeville act, a song, dance and costume change turn. She appeared at Keith's Theatre, Boston, the week of July 11, 1910, getting a good hand from the audiences.

She was very sedate during her last Boston engagement, so far as any of her theatrical associates knew. She had no young "stage Johnnies" hanging around. She came demurely to the theatre, did her act and left quietly. So far as any notoriety went, she might have been a "property" tree in the scenery.

Dispatches to-day from New York say that before departing suddenly from her sister's home in Passaic Park, N. J., Mrs. Sturtevant reproached Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins for refusing to lend her $2,500. She was asked what security she had offered Mrs. Jenkins.

Could Raise Loans.

"Only the security of my word," she is quoted as replying. "That would have been enough for me. I told her I was talented; that I had temporarily lost my voice, but that I would get it back, and I could make $150 a week on the stage and would repay her. And, oh, yes, I was about to forget, I had an option on an invention to offer her. You see, I have a gentleman friend who's an inventor, and he's made a patent for imitating leather so you can't tell the difference. I've got an option on that patent, but I haven't been able to raise the money to put it through.

"All Winter I went to downtown business men in New York, but they turned me off with their secretaries or else proposed some stock-selling scheme which was all profit to themselves. I went to the Standard Oil and tried to see Mr. Rockefeller—no, not the old one, the young one—but he wouldn't see me.

"So when I read of Mr. Allen's troubles and his regard for Mrs. Jenkins, the word 'leather' caught my eye, Mr. Allen being a leather manufacturer, and I wanted Mrs. Jenkins to introduce me to him, because I thought he might be interested in the patent. But when she called in her automobile and I told her that she just laughed and said: 'Little girl, no woman on earth could get near to that man now.'"

RIVAL THREE AT G. O. P. OUTING

WORCESTER, July 15.—The three candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor were naturally the chief figures of interest at a big outing of the Worcester County Republicans at Edgemere, Lake Quinsigamond, this afternoon. Speaker Joseph Walker, Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham and Representative Norman White were there, each to see that none of the other two gained any advantage that could be prevented.

Over 500 men attended the outing. Julius Beauregard, chairman of the Republican city committee, was in charge of arrangements. Among the prominent Republicans present, besides the gubernatorial candidates, were Secretary of State A. P. Langtry, Auditor John E. White, Mayor Logan of Worcester, Colonel Samuel Winslow, Robert Luce, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; Colonel Sidney O. Bigney of Attleboro, Representative "Bob" Washburn and Representative Clarence W. Hobbs.

"There has grown up in this country," declared Speaker Walker, "a feeling to which we Republicans cannot afford to shut our eyes, that the present protective tariff contains excessive rates which are being used by special interests and by great combinations of capital to create and maintain artificially high prices. This feeling must be allayed or both the protective tariff and its sponsor, the Republican party, will be repudiated at the polls."

Then Mr. Walker called for solid Republican support for "the Taft policy of a thorough investigation of the tariff by a competent tariff board."

CAMOYS TO WED SHERMAN TWIN

NEW YORK, July 15.—Ralph Francis Julian Stoner, Lord Camoys, usher at the Gould wedding and chum of the Hon. "Bobby" Beresford, is engaged to be married to Miss Mildred Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Watts Sherman, one of the wealthiest heiresses in the United States, according to a cable message from London received here.

It became known to-day, the message adds, that Lord Camoys is to leave England shortly to visit the Shermans at their Newport residence.

The intelligence that young Camoys intends following his friend Lord Decies in an international marriage will cause little surprise in social circles here and at Newport.

For many weeks following the marriage of Decies and Vivien Gould the slender, graceful figure of Camoys was well known at certain Fifth avenue homes.

He very frankly said then he was "jolly well pleased with American girls" and that, if he could find one to his liking, he would "extremely well like to remain on this side of the Atlantic, marry, perhaps, and engage in some form of business enterprise both interesting and profitable."

When "Bobby" Beresford and Camoys were staying at the Waldorf, after the wedding of Lord Decies, they spent much of their time "ragging" each other about their reported search for American heiresses.

MILK PRICES JUMP SUNDAY

One cent's worth of gloom will be added to every quart of milk sold at retail in Boston beginning next week. Starting to-morrow the Whiting and Hood and probably the Boston Dairy Companies will charge nine cents a quart and pay the milk producers the price which prevailed last Winter.

This means an increase to the farmers of about eight cents a can, or a cent a quart, and a corresponding increase in the retail price.

President S. H. Abbott of the Milk Consumers' League declares that some such action was necessary to prevent producers from disposing of their herds and bringing about a condition with regard to the supply of milk which he predicted would be calamitous.

President Abbott's announcement to the milk producers said:

"The milk situation has reached the most acute stage in many years. The various factions that have been pulling and hauling are largely responsible. Add to this the excessive heat of the past ten days, burning up the pastures and withering the crops, a condition exists that is unprecedented, and if something is not done at once to encourage the producers and prevent them from disposing of their herds, nothing short of a calamity must follow."

The Whiting and Hood companies have decided to pay last Winter's price, and it is altogether likely that the Boston Dairy Company will fall into line. The advance will amount to about eight cents per can, and will date from Sunday, July 16.

GOODWIN PLANS FOREST OF EDEN

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—Nat C. Goodwin is going to retire from the stage in the near future—probably next year—to spend the rest of his life in a Bohemian paradise. It is to be colonized from among his most intimate friends, and amid the palm bowers and orange blossoms of his San Jacinto ranch in California.

"I intend to get a good many years out of my paradise at San Jacinto," said Goodwin to-day. "I'm not going to remain on the stage all my life. When I retire, which will not be so far in the future, I am going to enjoy all there is in this beautiful country.

"I intend to found a colony of my best friends—the people who have meant something to me in my life. It will be another 'Forest of Eden,' an Arcadia where we will spend our time just as happily as the California climate and beauteous environment can make it."

FOSS TO KEEP FIRM FOR BILLS

Governor Foss smiled complacently to-day over the attempt of the Legislature to get ready for prorogation to-night—an attempt that failed, even with members of the Ways and Means Committee sitting last night until nearly midnight.

There is a lot of important work to be done yet, and Governor Foss has indicated to the Legislature that he proposes to do this work before he consents to prorogation.

And the Legislature can't close the session without the consent of the Governor.

Those in close touch with the situation on Beacon Hill think that they will have to step lively if they are ready for prorogation by next Saturday night and the Governor still stands by his date, the first of next month.

Important Bills Pending.

Finding that it was simply impossible to get through this week, both the House and the Senate yesterday adjourned until next Monday.

The big Elevated railway measures are on the program for Monday—the West End consolidation and the tunnel and subway bills, two very important pieces of legislation that the people demand.

Any attempt on the part of legislators to cut short the session without passing these measures would probably cause the hasty gentlemen to hear from the public in a way that would prove uncomfortable at the next election.

But the public may rest assured that any attempt that may be made to delay important legislation or dodge it by early prorogation will be frustrated by Governor Foss.

Some of the members who have not enjoyed the aggressive attitude of the Governor have suggested that they might adjourn sine die. But they run up against the constitution in this idea, which says that the Legislature cannot adjourn longer than two days.

Regrets Tax Plan Defeat.

So far as the hostility of the Legislature is concerned Governor Foss said that he attributed it largely to the hot weather and the lateness of the session.

"The Legislature has been responsible for the passage of many progressive measures," said he.

"The failure of the Legislature to take action on the State income tax and solve the taxation question is a great disappointment to me. I think this is one of the most important questions of the entire session.

"I should have liked to see this question of taxation settled this year. I should also like very much to see the workingmen's compensation bill and the New Haven tunnel, connecting with the Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad, settled."

INCREASE FUND TO STOP CHINA FLOODS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The people of Shanghai have added $10,000 to a similar amount appropriated by the American National Red Cross for a study of the rivers of China, to prevent disastrous floods, which periodically destroy crops and produce famine conditions.

WOOL BILL TO PASS, SENATORS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senators Crane and Smoot told President Taft to-day that the Senate is sure to pass a bill reducing the wool tariff at his session.

DEMOCRATS SENDING PROGRESSIVE NEW MEN TO NATIONAL CAPITAL

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Throughout the day rank of the Progressive Democracy is rapidly filling up in Senate and in House with strong and virile men.

Every fresh election in the States sends in new and potential figures.

Yonder in Georgia on Tuesday the State Legislature, by an overwhelming majority, on the first ballot, elected Hoke Smith to the Senate to succeed Joe Terrell, the appointee of ex-Governor Joe Brown, to fill the place made vacant by the death of Alexander Stephens Clay.

Hoke Smith is the strongest and most forceful man in Georgia and is accounted one of the strongest men in the South. He is "a massive progressive, not passive, but aggressive," and will be as modern and vital as his colleague Bacon is conservative. Georgia will hold no secondary place in the Senate with the two of them in their seats.

Between Two Fires.

Hoke Smith succeeds Joe Terrell, his political antagonist, an amiable and exceedingly shrewd politician, whose repute and vent have made him always popular with the conservative corporations.

Jewell and Bacon and the rest are between two fires with regard to Hoke Smith. In the first place they do not want him to come to the Senate at all, for when he comes they realize that he will focus the interest and attention of the Empire State of the South upon his 300 pounds of brawn and brain.

But on the other hand, since he has been elected to come to Washington, they want him to come at once, in order to get him out of Georgia, where his influence and his personality dominate the politics of the State.

If Hoke Smith comes to Washington and the extra session should be prolonged to keep him there, then Jewell hopes, with the aid of Clark Howell and the railroads, to recapture Georgia for the reactionaries and Joe Brown, whom Hoke has just defeated.

Wherefore, Jewell's game was to resign at once, rush his resignation and go home in order to force Smith to come to Washington, or leave the State unrepresented.

But the Hoke Smith luck is still in the ascendant. Congress will certainly adjourn within three weeks. So that Hoke Smith may hold on to the reins of government in Georgia, finish the progressive legislation to which he is pledged, and incidentally block the plans of the reactionaries by taking a vigorous part in the State election called to fill his place, and have himself succeeded by Murphy Candler or Dick Russell, or some other Democrat as progressive as himself.

Fights for Progressive Rule.

Then Hoke Smith, with enormous local prestige and tremendous personal force behind him, will come to the Senate, not to wait, but to carry the fight for progressive policies to the Republican opposition.

Then there is Kentucky, which has fully slated the gigantic Ollie James for Democratic Senator, to be elected in January.

Ollie James has already swept the Democratic primaries, held in Kentucky on the first Tuesday in July. James carried the battle to Senator Paynter so fast and so furious that Paynter withdrew before the primary pole and left the field to his opponent.

As a Senator Paynter was a conservative. He was a disciple of Bailey and he sat like Paul at the feet of the Texas Gamaliel, drinking the Bailey doctrine to the lees.

James is a vital progressive.

He is bold, aggressive, fearless in attack, of enormous stature and with a voice that could fill the remotest corner of Madison Square Garden.

He is also a brave, straight Democrat, active and unafraid, and capable of that crowning political virtue, an enduring human friendship.

Mr. Bryan said of Ollie James that he is one of the ablest of Democrats, and Mr. William R. Hearst has pronounced him one of the strongest Democratic figures of this era of progress.

Senator James will take his seat in early January.

Splendid Figures.

The combined girth and avoirdupois of Hoke Smith and Vardaman will equal that of any five men in the United States Senate.

Mississippi, too, is in the throes of a political struggle that is likely to land the picturesque and romantic Vardaman at last in the American Senate. Vardaman is able, eloquent, bold and indefatigable. John Sharp Williams, with all his tremendous prestige, only beat Vardaman by a few votes in the last senatorial primary in Mississippi, and all the present omens and political portents indicate that the chivalric Percy, perhaps the finest gentleman in the American Senate, but none the less a half conservative, will go down in August before the picturesque and redoubtable radical, whose extremism of the hustings is underlaid with a superb record as a sane, sound Governor of Mississippi, and whose integrity and patriotism will do honor to the Senate. Vardaman is more progressive than John Sharp Williams, and almost as fine an orator as Bailey.

Georgia, too, has sent a splendid young fellow to the House in the person of William Schley Howard. He succeeded the famous old Leonidas Livingston, and represents the Fifth, which is the Atlanta district.

Howard's campaign against the veteran and consummate politician, Livingston, was one of the most dashing and aggressive in the history of the State. And the young Congressman has entered upon his duties with exceptional vigor and intelligence.

"He is able, magnetic, eloquent and is already one of the most popular members of the House."

Champ Clark and Oscar Underwood esteem his character and ability in high degree, and look to him for valuable service.

Howard Fearless, Progressive.

I know no young Congressman who, in his first term, has won more of confidence and respect or acquired a more considerable influence than Howard of Georgia. He is the only son of the famous "Tom Howard," wittiest of Georgia, who told Ben Butler once, in reconstruction days, that he wouldn't trust him in the desert of Sahara with the anchor of the Great Eastern.

Howard is a fearless progressive in politics, and is destined to usefulness and fame.

The Democratic ranks are constantly filling up with men like these. By the time the Sixty-second Congress enters upon its regular December term, the Democratic party, adding to its already splendid rollcall, will be equipped with a roster of brains and character such as it has not known since the sixty unbroken years in which it ruled the Republic.

A long lease of power seems to be the promise of Democracy.

TAFT SCHEDULED AT BEVERLY AUGUST 15

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Plans are now making for the President to go to Beverly about August 15. The decision of the Senate to vote upon nearly all the legislative program of the House is believed to assure final adjournment of the session by that date. This prospect should make certain the President's sojourn at the Summer capital for about six weeks, as he intends to leave some time late in September for his Western trip. The executive offices will be moved there, but, because of the shortness of the President's stay in Massachusetts, an effort will be made to take as little official business there as possible.

COL. ALBERT CLARKE SINKING RAPIDLY

HIGHGATE, Vt., July 15.—The condition of Colonel Albert Clarke, secretary of the Home Market Club of Boston, is considered by those in attendance as extremely precarious. A weakening of the heart is the only perceptible change.

Byron Chandler and Grace La Rue

GRACE LA RUE CHANDLER

Byron Chandler, "Millionaire Kid," Inherits Another Million from Grandmother.

Byron Chandler of Boston and Manchester, N. H., the "Million Dollar Kid," and husband of Grace La Rue, the actress, will inherit a million dollars from the estate of his grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin F. Martin, of Manchester, whose death is announced to-day.

Mrs. Martin, who was ninety-eight years old, was Byron's maternal grandmother. She held a tremendous amount of paper mill stock. Byron was her favorite grandchild.

Byron's brother, Benjamin M. Chandler, will also inherit a large portion of the estate, it is expected.

That Byron Chandler can spend a million dollars if any young man can is easily allowed by all who have followed his meteoric career in the Old World and the New.

Son of Manchester Banker.

The family history of Byron Chandler is briefly told. His personal career would fill a book already, and if continued as it has begun will more than supply a five-foot library.

He is thirty-one years old. He is the son of the late George Byron Chandler of Manchester, N. H., a former State Senator and banker. The elder Chandler married Miss Fannie Martin, daughter of the late Benjamin F. Martin. There were two sons, Benjamin Martin Chandler and Byron Chandler. It was the latter who was destined to become known as "The Million Dollar Kid."

At his father's death a few years ago Byron came into possession of the first slice of his wealth. It was reported of him at the time that he went to the Amoskeag Bank in Manchester, a boy not then out of his 'teens, drew $10,000 for a first instalment and plunged down the bank steps, waving a wad of bills in each fist. He shouted: "Now for it."

Byron proceeded to carry out his gay motto. Since that time he had been married, divorced and married again. He has been sued on the side twice in connections with affairs of the heart. He made his name bright in the theatrical and hotel circles of Boston and then blazed a trail along Broadway and to London.

Led Gay Life in Boston.

He became the terror of automobile policemen and the idol of those to whom lavish expenditure appeals. Of small stature, he drew and held attention to himself by his gay life and free use of money.

He circled around Boston at first and became one of the familiar figures in the Adams House billiard room, in the theatres, cafes and other places where he could find ready friends and diversion.

Eight years ago Byron went abroad and enjoyed Paris. He returned to America. In 1902 he married Miss Grace Estelle Stecher, a New York singer, daughter of an estimable New Jersey family. The wedding took place in Bermuda. There was deep opposition from the Stechers and the bride became estranged from her parents. Subsequently she became estranged from Byron.

In 1905 Byron decided to set up as a country gentleman. He bought Red Hills Farm, a beautiful estate at Reading. He furnished it lavishly, installed kennels, bought horses, dogs, traps, Turkish rugs, paintings and other costly accessories. He started in to take Reading society by storm.

Owned Private Golf Links.

Society didn't storm, somehow. He played once or twice by invitation on the links of the Reading Golf Club. Then he laid out private links on his own grounds.

At the end of three years Byron sold Red Hills Farm to the New England Kennel Club. Reading society smiled a bit and resumed the placid tenor of its conservative way.

During his residence in Reading, Byron contrived to lose his Massachusetts automobile license by an unfortunate episode in a Cambridge trolley track. Byron was charged with objecting to the trolley car's searchlight and declining to get his car off the track till the motorman extinguished the searchlight.

Byron forgot Reading chilliness in the warmer distractions of New York. Then came his second romance.

In the Fall of 1908 Sam Bernard started out with a new musical comedy, "Nearly a Hero." His leading woman was Grace LaRue. She was the divorced wife of Sam Burke, a comedian. She had the role of Angelina De Vere, a musical comedy queen.

BYRON CHANDLER

Young Manchester, N. H., man who has inherited another big fortune, this time from his grandmother; and his actress wife.

One of her best songs, which became quite popular, was entitled "My Sahara Belle." In this song Grace LaRue appeared in a gauzy Oriental costume, in which she danced about the stage with sinuous grace.

The chorus of the song ran thus:

"Come, My Arab Lady,
Where the palms are shady,
Hasten to my side.
While the stars are beaming
And the sands are gleaming
Swiftly we will ride.
You and I, dear, only,
Will not find it lonely.
Happy we will be
In the desert life so free,
In my tent we'll dwell,
My own Sahara Belle."

Captivated by the Song.

It was a seductive song and it took "The Million Dollar Kid" plumb off his feet when he first heard it. After that Byron devoted himself to Grace La Rue. The "Nearly a Hero" show came to Boston. Byron came too. The show went along the road. So did Byron.

Early the next year (1909) Mrs. Grace Estelle Stecher Chandler, Byron's wife, whose name had generally been forgotten, so far as he was concerned, suddenly filed a libel for divorce against Byron under the New York laws. The case was heard in New York the following April. Mrs. Chandler made accusations against Byron and a young woman, giving Chicago and November 12, 1908, as the time and place. Mrs. Chandler was given a divorce decree which became absolute the following August.

Meanwhile Chandler had been abroad. So had Grace La Rue. That Summer report was cabled back here of their marriage. It was confirmed, then denied, then re-confirmed and re-denied, until no one knew what to believe.

Slapped Mackay's Face.

In July, a month before Byron's first wife obtained her decree, Byron and Grace La Rue returned from Europe on the Mauretania. On that voyage back occurred the famous incident of Byron slapping (?) the face of George J. Mackay, a husky person from Los Angeles. According to Byron, Mackay and a few Dukes and other tourists were singing a song in the smoking room which Byron took as a reflection on Grace La Rue. The song was about a lady in a kimono.

"I slapped Mackay's face twice," said Byron, "and he didn't defend himself."

Mackay told dock reporters, however, that he made Byron apologize for trying to cut up rough. Somehow the episode brought to people's minds that song, "I Was a Hero, Too," which Sam Bernard used to sing in the same show where Grace La Rue had charmed Byron with her "Sahara Belle" song.

Byron eventually said he and Grace La Rue were man and wife, but he did not give details. The marriage story was finally accepted by the public.

BOSTON PARTY NOW IN BERLIN

BERLIN, July 15.—The Boston Chamber of Commerce party arrived in the capital of Germany at noon to-day, after a journey from the flourishing port of Hamburg, which began at 8:30 a. m. Everybody from Boston was vastly interested in the country he travelled through, and the daylight trip gave all a good opportunity to inspect flourishing towns and cities from coach windows. Berlin merchants, manufacturers and officials gave the Bostonians a warm welcome, and after the Chamber of Commerce delegation had luncheon it was taken upon an automobile trip which was so routed as to provide the visitors with a good idea of the aspect and extent of the imperial city.

The ride took the party through "Unter den Linden" from Emperor William's imposing palace to the Brandenburg Gate. This is one of the most famous drives in the world and has long been celebrated in song and story. After this auto ride the Chamber of Commerce party can personally testify to its beauty. It may also be said that what they have seen of parks in Europe, beautiful as they are, makes them very well pleased with Boston's equipment in that line. After traversing "Unter den Linden," the party were taken to Thiergarten and Charlottenburg, an important example of town planting and provided with a museum for the instruction of workingmen.

United States Embassy and Consulate officials, members of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce and Secretary George S. Atwood of the American Association of Commerce in Berlin arranged the sightseeing and entertainment program here. Mr. Atwood visited Boston last year and while there got in touch with the Boston Chamber of Commerce and other New England commercial organizations.

Hear Professor Eberstadt.

This evening the Bostonians will listen to an address by Professor Eberstadt on modern housing, a subject to which Germans have given attention with characteristic thoroughness and scientific attainments. They were much impressed by the prosperity and the very evident spirit of progress in Berlin. There is much to learn here, even by men from Boston.

Among the municipal, civic and industrial features to be inspected in Berlin are town planning transportation, safety devices, suppression of noise, artistic effects in elevated railroad trestles and tree-planting, street paving, pressed gas street lighting system, postoffice methods, postal banks, automatic stamp-selling, telephone service, taxation methods, municipal sewer-farm system, municipal abattoirs, automatic lunch rooms, employment bureaus and arbitration courts, commercial and continuation schools, model apartment houses, hospitals and welfare work for employes.

Go to Potsdam Sunday.

To-morrow the Bostonians will go to Potsdam and visit Emperor William's palace. While the party is in Berlin conferences may be held on some such subjects as old age pensions, accident and invalidity insurance, the supervision of factories to protect workingmen, state insurance funds and their use in building homes for toilers, tuberculosis and other hospitals for the prevention of disease, the welfare of women and children, German railroad methods and the waterway and electric power policy of the government in relation to German industries and foreign commerce.

F. J. McIsaac of the Boston AMERICAN staff, who is with the Boston Chamber of Commerce party abroad, will have a page in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN full of the most interesting details of the trip made by the Boston party.

GRAND TRUNK TO FIGHT MELLEN

The attempts of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to block the Grand Trunk at Woonsocket, has resulted in action by the Superior Court at Providence upon the petition filed by the Southern New England Railway, the corporate name for the Grand Trunk, to have an injunction issued to prevent President Mellen's road from building freight houses and other structures on a plot of land lying directly on the route mapped out by the Grand Trunk engineers.

The request for an injunction was made by John S. Murdock, of Providence, vice-president of the Southern New England and Rhode Island counsel for the Grand Trunk. Judge Stearns has issued subpoenas, which are being served to-day. These are returnable July 21, the day on which the matter of issuing a temporary restraining order will be threshed out.

Attorney Murdock had already asked the court for an order asking that the property at Woonsocket be judged necessary to the Southern New England's right of way. The hearing on this will be September 18.

At the same time that Judge Stearns was hearing the first petition at Providence, Mayor James Mullen of Woonsocket was giving his police orders to notify the New Haven contractors to discontinue the work of construction on the freight sheds.

Grand Trunk Will Fight.

The steps taken by the Grand Trunk indicate that the Southern New England intends to fight the Mellen road tooth and nail. In the court petitions the Grand Trunk makes it very plain that the New Haven did not buy up the Woonsocket plot until after Grand Trunk surveyors had staked their route over the land. The charge is openly made that the New Haven is attempting to frustrate the Southern New England in its work of pushing through from Palmer to Providence.

The obstacle placed in the way of the Grand Trunk at Woonsocket is only another instance, railroad experts say, of the bitter opposition President Hayes of the Grand Trunk has met with from President Mellen. Again and again the Grand Trunk has had to surmount these stumbling blocks in Vermont, in Maine, in Massachusetts and now in Rhode Island. It is said that the recent action of the Boston & Maine in discontinuing the through car service at Portland for the Grand Trunk, was but another example of the New Haven's methods.

Blocking the Route.

Less than a month ago, when the AMERICAN printed the first story of the developments at Woonsocket, the Grand Trunk petitioned the Massachusetts Railroad Commission for permission to change its route so as to come over the State line into Blackstone and pass back into Rhode Island.

The fact came out at the hearing that the New Haven was blocking the route first mapped out for the Grand Trunk through the purchases of the Woonsocket land. The commission refused to grant the permit, on the ground that the change would cut through a schoolhouse and a cemetery, and that the real issue was a matter for the courts of Rhode Island to decide.

The Grand Trunk thereupon carried its complaint to Providence. The New Haven immediately got busy, and was rushing the construction of its freight buildings at Woonsocket. Were these finished, the Grand Trunk would have been forced to seek another right of way, at a great expense, or else build a viaduct over the freight yards at an even greater expenditure of money.

All back pictures printed in AMERICAN'S $10,000 proverb contest will be reprinted in Sunday's AMERICAN. I offer a genuine, guaranteed Remedy for tobacco or snuff habit, in 72 hours. It is mild, pleasant, strengthening. Overcomes that peculiar nervousness and craving for cigarettes, cigars, pipe, chewing tobacco or snuff. One man in 10 can use tobacco without apparent injury: to the other nine it is poisonous and seriously injurious to health, causing such disorders as nervous dyspepsia, sleeplessness, gas, belching, gnawing, or other uncomfortable sensation in stomach; constipation, headache, weak eyes, loss of vigor, red spots on skin, throat irritation, asthma, bronchitis, heart failure, lung trouble, catarrh, melancholy, neurasthenia, impotency, loss of memory and will-power, impure (poisoned) blood, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, neuritis, heartburn, torpid liver, loss of appetite, bad teeth, foul breath, enervation, lassitude, lack of ambition, falling out of hair, baldness, and many other disorders. It is unsafe and torturing to attempt to cure yourself of tobacco or snuff habit by merely stopping—don't do it. The correct way is to eliminate the nicotine poison from the system, strengthen the weakened, irritated membranes and nerves and genuinely overcome the craving. You can quit tobacco and enjoy yourself a thousand times better while feeling always in robust health. My FREE book tells all about the wonderful 3 days Method. Inexpensive, reliable. Also Secret Remedy for conquering habit in another without his knowledge. Full particulars including my Book on Tobacco and Snuff Habit mailed in plain wrapper, free. Don't delay. Keep this; show to others. This adv't may not appear again. Address: EDW. J. WOODS, 534 Sixth Ave., [illegible], New York, N.Y.

President Mellen of the New Haven is finding decided opposition to his plans to monopolize New England transportation and shut out the Grand Trunk.

HORSE KICKS MAN TO DEATH

Arthur Raynes, 35 years old, an employe at Rhodes' stable, No. 17 South street, Lynn, was kicked to death by a horse. He had taken the animal into a coach house to hitch it up for a West Lynn grocer, and was fixing the harness when the horse raised a hind foot, striking Raynes on the head. He was knocked unconscious and the horse trampled upon him.

The commotion in the coach house attracted Charles Johnson, another employe, who dragged the unconscious man from beneath the horse's hoofs. Haynes died on his way to the Lynn Hospital from a fractured skull.

ELECTRIC SHOCK KILLS LINEMAN

Walter Anderson, a lineman for the Weymouth Electric Light Company, was shocked to death on Nantasket avenue, Nantasket, when he slipped and fell across two primary wires. He and other workmen were connecting broken wires. He was thirty years old and lived in Lowell.

COURT SCORES LOAN 'SHARKS'

In this sentence, Judge Edward P. Pierce of the Superior Court bench expressed his opinion of a group of money lenders who were sitting in the Equity session of the Suffolk Superior Court, as one of their customers, John H. H. Murray, was in court for failing to obey an order. One of the principles of equity is that the party seeking relief must come in with clean hands. Judge Pierce applied that maxim to the case when he made the remark.

Murray lives in Milton. On April 8, 1910, he borrowed $65 from the S. R. Briggs Company and he gave a mortgage on his household furniture. His wife joined him in giving the mortgage. The rate of interest agreed on was 18 per cent. per year. Frequent renewals of notes, owing to the inability of Murray to pay any of the principal, added to his indebtedness. The Briggs Company attempted to foreclose the mortgage. Murray refused to turn over the mortgaged property.

The Briggs Company then brought a bill in equity to compel Murray to give up his furniture under the terms of the contract. Murray did not appear and the bill was taken as confessed against him. On April 25 the Briggs Company secured a final decree ordering Murray to turn over the furniture.

Murray, however, refused to turn over the furniture even then. He appeared in court without counsel, but Judge Pierce questioned the plaintiff and brought out the real condition of affairs. Judge Pierce picked up a pencil and figured out that Murray owed the "sharks" $95. He asked Murray if he thought he could raise that sum. Murray said he thought he could if he was given sufficient time. Judge Pierce then said he would give Murray until August 22 to raise the money.

Murray left the court room a much happier man than when he went in. When he went in he thought that all he owned in the world, the furniture of his little home, was to be taken away from him.

The bill to prevent just such cases as this comes before Governor Foss for his signature on Monday. It was backed by the AMERICAN and was rushed through the Legislature without a dissenting voice at any stage. This bill will put the sharks under the supervision of the State regulations. When this bill becomes a law it will crown with victory the AMERICAN'S fight to curb the money sharks who prey upon the poor and unfortunate.

SHOULD SOUNDLY PUNISH MAGEE

Like all self-respecting and law-abiding citizens, the Cardinals' players, one and all, are lined against Sherwood Magee, champion batsman of the National League, who last Monday made an unprovoked assault on Umpire W. P. Finneran in Philadelphia. Magee, without provocation, slugged the arbitrator and laid open his right cheek bone from the mouth to the eye. Finneran's injuries were dressed at a hospital. It was the biggest black eye ever given the national pastime.

To-day there is a stain of blood on the baseball horizon, which will, it is said, only be erased by the banishment of Sherwood Magee from the game for all time and the subjugation of the Phillies' player. It is only the truth that the men under the command of Charley Dooin and on the payroll of Horace Fogel are the most troublesome members of the National League. President Fogel is partly to blame.

Fogel's Big Kick.

Mr. Fogel is forever protesting against the umpire, and only recently made this statement in the presence of the writer: "I got Jim Johnstone his job, and what do I get for such courtesy? Nothing. Johnstone is rubbing dirt in my eye, and if it were not for me Johnstone would not be an umpire in the league to-day. But if I got him his job I should have a say in firing him, and I intend to get that man out of the league."

Such statemunts are enough to provoke trouble from the ball players. The Cardinal players, who were the Phillies' opponents at the time of the fracas, deplored the brawl. They are aligned against Magee, and if the case were put to them as a jury they would banish the belligerent outfielder from the game for all time.

"If Lynch ever lets Magee back into the National League," said Ed Koney, "then you had better prepare for a fight on the ball field every day. I think it was the biggest piece of rowdyism I ever saw on any ball field in all my career as a player. If Lynch is able to wear the presidential toga fittingly, he must rise to the occasion now.

Lynch Made a Mistake.

"The National League's chief executive made a huge mistage when he fined Umpire Klem only $50 for slugging Manager Bresnahan. By letting Klem off with a fine Lynch opened the flood gates for the fight which was staged on the Philadelphia diamond Monday. The players have been made aggressive ever since, and the Magee incident was only the culmination of a feeling of unrest among the players."

President Fogel says that his defence will be that Magee has been under a great mental strain and suffered from mental aberration. It is aid that Magee has had brain trouble ever since the hot spell set in.

PICK LAWRENCE IN MOTOR RACE

Percy Lawrence, the speedy pace follower of the Pacific coast, is being picked as the winner of the four-cornered motor pace race scheduled to take place at the Revere cycle track this evening. Lawrence has been the sensation of the grand circuit this season and a win for the youngster to-night over such men as Collins, Wiley and Butler would boost his stock considerably.

Wiley, however, is a tough customer in an hour race, and the Syracuse boy is sure to give the coast wonder a hard battle, for Wiley in the past has shown that the hour racing game is just to his liking.

Collins and Butler, the other two members of the quartet, should not be overlooked for they are bound to make things interesting for both Wiley and Lawrence, barring accidents and the Cambridge rider is apt to spring a surprse.

The pro-riders will be seen in a mile handcap event, and a five-mile open. One of the new riders to be seen in the sprint races is Pat Logan of South Boston. Logan has not been seen on the track since he was injured in the six-day race at Madison Square Garden two years ago. Two amateur events will complete the card.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH TO HOLD FIELD DAY

This year the field day of St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Literary Society of Roxbury, which will be held at the Locust street grounds on August 10, promises to surpass any previous field day. Many well-known athletes have signified their intention of competing. The events are open to all, and include the 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, one-mile run, boys' three-legged race, girls' race and ladies' egg race. A feature of the affair will be the presence of 1,100 members of the famous Wilkesbarre C. T. A. Regiment, which will be encamped at Castle Island that week as guests of the society.

KILBANE EXPECTS TO WIN THE KLINE BOUT

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—Johnny Kilbane, at Plaza Del Rey, is putting the finishing touches on his training for the Kline contest and seems to be better than when he entered the ring against Rivers in their twenty-round event in which Joe gained the decision. Kilbane figures on outpointing Kline and believes he can keep away from Patsy's swift ones.

FLYNN AND MORRIS TO FIGHT IN FRISCO

TULSA, Okla., July 15.—A boxing contest between Jim Flynn, the fighting airman, and Carl Morris, the Oklahoma "white hope," will be staged either in Philadelphia or San Francisco next August, according to a statement by B. F. Ufer, Morris's manager, just returned from San Francisco.

O'NEIL MAY ROW.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 15.—John W. O'Neil of Halifax, champion amateur sculler of America, has sent in his entry to the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen's regatta, at Saratoga, N. Y., on July 28 and 29. Although Mr. O'Neil has entered, he has not yet definitely made up his mind whether he will compete.

NEWARK TEAM ON THE MARKET

NEWARK, July 15.—Owner and Manager Joe McGinnity of the Newarks was so enraged at the defeat of his team by Providence he declared his willingness to sell the club, and if he keeps in the same frame of mind for a day or so there will be a new owner here.

After the last man was retired McGinnity walked up to the press box and addressing the agent of Frank Mihlon, a local cafe owner, informed him that Mihlon could exercise his option on the purchase of the club now, as he was ready to sell.

Mihlon offered $50,000 for the franchise a month or so ago. He is one of the leading sporting men in the city and with John M Chapman owns the Newark bicycle track and other bicycle tracks in New Haven, Providence and Revere Beach, near Boston.

BASEBALL CHATTER

It seems to be the opinion of Horace Fogel, president of the Phillies, that Tom Lynch did wrong in giving Sherwood Magee an indefinite suspension for slugging Umpire Finneran. Mr. Fogel points out that he voted for Lynch at two annual meetings, and says it is an evidence of ingratitude on the part of the league executive to punish the Phillies so severely. Lynch's election last year was made unanimous. According to President Fogel's reasoning, therefore, ball players in the National League ought to be allowed to slug when and where they pleased, without any punishment, for to suspend one of them is a blow to some owner or other, and all the magnates voted for Lynch.

* * *

Connie Mack requested President Johnson of the American League to attend the third game of the series between the Tigers and Athletics. No reason for the request was given out, but the chances are Connie wanted Ban to see what a ball player like Ty Cobb could do to a ball club like Philadelphia's. At least, that was about what Ban saw. When Ty has a special incentive to work, his performances are even more wonderful than ordinarily. It must have been a treat for Detroit's rather unappreciative fans to watch the Georgia Peach in that series, for he did things that no other athlete has ever dreamed of doing.

* * *

The Dodgers may not prove at all easy for the Cardinals in the coming series. Dahlen's men gave the Cubs plenty of trouble. John Hummel is back in the game and his slugging is helping a lot. The Brooklyn pitchers are not going as well as they should, but the same is true of the Cards. Bresnahan will be satisfied with nothing less than a clean sweep of the series, but he will have to do some tall hustling to get better than an even break if the Dodgers continue to play as they did against Chicago.

* * *

Rumor had it awhile ago that Ray Collins was to be sold, traded or canned outright by the Red Sox. After Ray's showing against Chicago, he will probably keep on drawing pay from the Boston club for some time to come, and there won't be any stories about shipping him elsewhere. It was some feat to hold the White Sox to five hits and to gain a victory over Ed Walsh, who is usually the hardest man in the league for Boston to beat. Walsh was pitching some, too.

TENNIS MATCHES.

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 15.—The schedule of tennis fixtures was announced at the Swimming club to-day, and it comprises five matches. The first, in women's singles, will be started July 19; the second, the annual match for the State campionship in men's singles, begins August 7; a week later will be started the championship tournament in men's doubles; and on August 28 the final tournament in women's doubles. Harold I. Sewall of Boston is chairman of the tennis committee this year.

NEW YORK A. C. NOT TO DESERT

NEW YORK, July 15.—Matthew P. Halpin, captain of the New York Athletic Club, and several other officers of the Winged Foot organization were at a loss to-day to understand the reason for the printed story that the club was to sever its connections with the Amateur Athletic Union, and voiced the intention of getting to the bottom of the story with the idea of punishing the purveyor of the misinformation.

Mr. Halpin said: "It's simply some more of that 'under the umbrella stuff,' and on a par with a lot more of the rot disseminated by an individual who is entirely irresponsible. I have no idea how his imagination could have taken such a tangent, and will take means to see that a retraction is made. There is absolutely nothing to the rumor.

Bartow S. Weeks, a former president of the club, stated that the yarn was made out of the whole cloth, and that it could be stated without fear of contradiction that the club had no intention of leaving the union, the principles of which it had always upheld. Whoever circulated such a rumor must have been made the butt of some jokester.

When asked what he thought of the story, James E. Sullivan, one of the members of the club, who was one of the chief movers along with A. G. Mills, Bartow S. Weeks and others in the formation of the union, all he would say was "beat."

One of the many stupid things in the story was that because the club had spent $25,000 on athletics last year it was quite likely that this had something to do with the club's withdrawal from competitive athletics, and that the club would probably develop into a social organization.

A man well known in athletics, in discussing this phase of the situation of the matter, said: "The $25,000 spoken of was expended in many ways. In this expenditure was included the salaries of many men who have absolutely nothing to do with the track and field end of the organization, and I'll venture to assert that it did not cost the club $5,000 for its athletics last year.

FIVE-MILE PRO. RACE TO BE FEATURE EVENT

Division 3, A. O. H., of North Abington will hold its second annual field day Saturday, August 5, at Ridge Hill Grove. Baseball and athletic sports will be the features. Entries are being received for the events, and the best athletes of Plymouth County will compete. A special five-mile professional running race is on the card, with all the star money-chasers entered. Entries close with James Lynch, No. 79 West street, North Abington.

DIXIE IV. MUST GO THE LIMIT

PUT-IN-BAY, O., July 15.—Dixie IV., the international cup defender, will be made to go her limit in next Tuesday's speed boat races of the Interlake Yachting Association regatta at Put-in-Bay, when she will compete against the famous Disturber II., the present holder of the American mile record for speed boats.

At the Mississippi Valley power boat regatta held at Dubuque, Ia., on July 4, Commodore James A. Pugh of Chicago sent his new Fauber hydroplane, Disturber II., against the record of 37.75 miles an hour, made two years ago on the Hudson River by the Dixie III. On her third trial she set a new American mark of 38.54 miles an hour in a wonderful performance of speed in shallow waters.

There is no question in the minds of the experts that Pugh will make over 40 miles an hour at the bay, where the water is deeper and conditions are more favorable for fast time.

When the Disturber II. meets the East-speed king the greatest power boat struggle ever held in American waters by two of the highest speed boats in the country will be sure to result in new records. The Fauber hydroplane is driven by twin screws, the two powerful eight cycle Sterling engines developing 200 actual horsepower.

PORKY FLYNN WILL MEET JOE JEANNETTE

"Porky" Flynn of Boston, who defeated "Jewey" Smith decisively, will be up against the real thing in Fistiana next Tuesday night when he faces Joe Jeannette in the ring of the Twentieth Century A. A. Jeannette and Flynn were matched before, but the colored heavyweight was afflicted with a felon on his finger, which necessitated the calling off of the match.

Flynn and his manager were cruel enough to intimate that Jeannette's finger was not as sore as he represented, which has aroused the ire of Jeannette to such an extent that he vehemently declares that Flynn may be sorry he spoke so maliciously. The men are very evenly matched in height, weight and reach, which would suggest the fact that one of the hardest fought contests ever seen in public between rival heavyweights is likely to result.

Jim Barry of Chicago and Tony Ross, the Italian heavyweight champion of Pennsylvania, have also been secured by the club, and will be in evidence at the ringside to challenge the winner.

ATZ GETS CORNER IN NEW SENATOR PITCHER

Manager Ats of Providence in the Eastern League, has annexed another pitcher, signing Fred Sherry, a youngster, who has been with the Washington club. Sherry was the last of the recruit twirlers to leave the Senators. He had great success in the big show in finishing games, but the two battles which he started resulted fatally for the home team. Big and strong, Sherry possesses all the earmarks of a coming twirler of class, and, to use the expression of Kid Elberfeld, "All that big boy needs is experience to make him one of the best pitchers in the American League." Of the seven young pitchers taken to Atlanta in the Spring with the Senators, Sherry stayed the longest with McAleer. During the big league season Sherry finished ten games and worked great in every one.

MONEY FOR BASEBALL TO BE FOUND A-PLENTY

There is little doubt that William Hepburn Russell can get all the backing he needs to acquire the stock of the Boston National Club. Baseball is growing so fast as an amusement enterprise that such structures as Shibe Park, Forbes Field and the new Polo Grounds are necessary in all the large centers. Very possibly Mr. Russell will live to see both Boston clubs playing on the same field, that field surrounded by tiers of seats that will dwarf the stadium. Needless to say Boston will have no tail-end team when this 1915 dream comes true.

JOHNSON READY TO FIGHT WELLS

LONDON, July 15.—In spite of repeated denials, Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight champion of the world, will meet Bombardier Wells, England's entry in the heavyweight race, in a ring combat. The pair will battle for the largest purse ever hung up for a match in this country. The sum has not been mentioned. The conditions for the fight have all been arranged, and all that remains to bind the battle is the signatures of the principals. The name of the individual who will promote the match has not been made public as yet.

Johnson has already consented to meet Petty Officer Curran. His bout with Wells will take place shortly after Curran has been disposed of.

WORCESTER GOT $3,000 FOR CATCHER O'NEIL

WORCESTER, July 15.—Catcher Steve O'Neil of the Worcester baseball club, who has been sold by Manager John J. O'Donnell to the Cleveland American league team for $3,000, will report to Cleveland at the end of the New England League season in September. Worcester was offered $4,000 for O'Neil's immediate release, but refused it.

Wide-Open Bars and Free Rum in "Prohibition" Maine!

MAYORS and Chiefs of Police in Maine, Sworn to Uphold the Constitution and Enforce the Laws, Close their Eyes at Hundreds of Open Bar Rooms in the Pine Tree State and Make the Repeal of the Prohibitory Amendment in September Altogether Unlikely.

"I'm Not the Boss," Says Chief Dresser of Portland, asked why the bars were open, "See the Mayor." "The Saloon is a COUNTY Proposition," Says Mayor Curtis, "See the Sheriff." And the Sheriff—Lew Moulton of Standish — Has "Nothing to Say."

Liberal Minded Men of Affairs Declare that there can be No Hope of Repeal While the Open Bar Room Flourishes in Maine. One Week Ago Portland Had from Thirty to Fifty of them. Bangor Has as Many More.

In all the State there are 1,500 Places where Liquor is Sold. Why Should the Proprietors and Their Employes and Allies Desire Repeal and Local Option When they Now Get for Nothing the Privilege that might Cost Hundreds of Dollars?

Maine Voters Who Favor Local Self-Government, and Who See Repeal About to be Ditched by the Course and Attitude of Public Officers, are Fast Becoming Angered With the Administration.

Police of Portland and Bangor Have Practically to Step Over Open Bars to Get into Their Station Houses. — "In Bangor", Says Chief Davis of That City, "Public Sentiment Demands the Saloon."

But the Constitution Makes it an Outlaw, and "Public Sentiment" Which Can Have the Saloon When it Wants It, Constitution or No Constitution, May Not Take Interest Enough to Vote "Yes" on September 11.

CHICAGO CUBS HERE TO PLAY RUSTLERS

By R. W. LARDNER.

BATTING ORDER.

BOSTON.	CHICAGO.
Sweeney, 2b.	Sheckard, l. f.
Tenney, 1b.	Schulte, r. f.
Herzog, s.s.	Hofman, 1b.
Kaiser, l.f.	Zimmerman, 2b.
Miller, r.f.	Doyle, 3b.
Ingerton, 3b.	Tinker, s.s.
Kling, c.	Goode, c.f.
Flaherty, c.f.	Graham, c.
Mattern, p.	Curtis, p.

No sooner do the Rustlers get through entertaining one contender for the National League pennant than another comes along. The St. Louis upstarts have departed fairly well pleased with their accomplishments here, and now the Cubs are holding forth in Boston, ready to open a series which will include four regularly scheduled games and one postponement.

One battle with Chance's team is on for today. The postponement will be played as part of a double-header Monday afternoon, and there will be single conflicts with Chicago on Tuesday and Wednesday. The Chicagoans are at present in third place, but only a short step from the top. They are so accustomed to dropping from the top and pulling themselves up again that a little thing like a fall of two or three rungs, or a similar rise, has no apparent effect on them.

Expect Five Victories.

But they have evil designs on our ball club. They haven't lost a game to the 1911 Rustlers yet, and they actually are counting on adding five victories at Tenney's expense this trip. Five wins without a loss would help them considerably for Cincinnati may trim New York once or twice, Pittsburg is likely to bump the Phillies and the Dodgers won't allow St. Louis to run over them rough-shod. However, the result of the Pittsburg-Philadelphia series doesn't make a great deal of difference to the champions. If the Pirates drop three or four, Chance will not be worried, for he refuses to consider Dooin's gang as formidable a rival as some of the rest.

Along with the Cubs are our old friends Wilbur Goode, Peaches Graham, William Collins and Clifton Garfield Curtis. At least two of these ex-Rustlers, Goode and Graham, will appear actively against Boston. Jim Archer is Chance's regular catcher, but Jim will hardly be asked to do the heavy work five times in four days. This means that Peaches will catch once or twice. It will be hard to root against him, but root we must.

The Cubs will undoubtedly try to swipe bases on John Kling and John will just as undoubtedly try not to let them. This battle of Chicago legs against the Kling arm will be one of the interesting sideshows.

A Bride at the Games.

Cubs who are here now but who didn't feel like traveling in May are John J. Evers and Charles Williams. John is doing a little coaching and a lot of yearning for the day when he will be able to pastime once more. Charles is the secretary of the outfit and distinguished as the holder of the world's record for the distance between Columbus Avenue and Tremont street, on the Walpole Street track. He never broke any mark coming back.

There are three wives in the Cub party, Mrs. Chance, Mrs. Cole and the brand new one, Mrs. Schulte. She is getting her view of Frank's playing on foreign fields, and he is so good a performer on the road that she is really learning for the first time just how valuable he is as an all-around pastimer.

The only half of yesterday's ninth inning at the South End grounds consumed about twenty anxious minutes and most of Roger Bresnahan's vitality. When the round started the score was 7 to 3 in favor of Boston and George Tyler was going along so nicely that no danger was in sight. But the support decided to blow at the same time George's control went back on him. If it hadn't been for Wallie Smith's kindness in hitting into a double play there's no telling what the finish would have been.

Might Have Tied Score.

As it was, the Cards increased their total by two tallies and would have tied it up if Ed Konetchy's mighty wallop had gone anywhere but straight into Kaiser's hands. If anyone had a bet on Boston, or St. Louis either, for that matter, he must have suffered a lot during that awful half round. Mr. Bresnahan did everything in his power to rattle Tyler, calling him yellow and a great many other things. The rest of the St. Louis athletes made awful noises and did queer dances. There's no way of telling what effect their antics had on the Boston left-hander, but it's a cinch he was affected by something, for he had horrible trouble trying to find the plate. He probably caught his wildness from the four Card pitchers used. Golden Geyer and the two Laudermilks were decidedly shy on control, and it's a wonder George didn't come down with the disease earlier in the afternoon.

The round started with Herzog's bad throw of Mowrey's bounder. Then Oakes walked and Miller dropped Bresnahan's liner. With the bases full, Smith was sent up to hit for Louie Laudermilk. He hopped one to Tyler and an easy double play resulted, Mowrey being forced at the plate and Smith nailed at first. But Huggins drew a base on balls, Hauser was hit by a pitched ball and Ellis walked. Thus were two runs forced over the plate. Two were still needed to tie and Koney was up with the bases full. He smashed a terrific liner toward the left field fence, but Kaiser grabbed it.

Runs Came Easy.

The Rustlers didn't have to work at all hard for their runs. Golden, who started for the Cards, had his old trouble. He could get the ball about three inches from the plate, but no closer. He gave two passes in the opener, but Boston was held runless. It was different in the second. With Miller out, Ingerton and Kling singled, after getting Golden in a hole. Flaherty was easy, but Tyler, Sweeney and Tenney drew successive walks, Ingerton and Kling scoring. Geyer was called to the rescue, but he walked Herzog and another run was in. Kaiser's scratch single and Hauser's wild throw gave the Rustlers two more and then the side was finally retired.

Grover Cleveland Laudermilk, the first of the brothers to appear, was practically unhittable. Boston scored twice against him because of his wildness. Louie Laudermilk pitched the eighth inning and wasn't seriously wounded, although two hits were made off him and he uncorked a dangerous wild pitch.

Altogether, it was a fearful battle to watch, with even the occupants of the press stand in danger of being beaned by some of those crazy hurlers.

Luck was responsible for the first two St. Louis runs, which came in the fourth. Two drives took bad bounds and went for singles when they should have been easy outs. Higgins' triple and an out gave the Cards their third count in the eighth.

DETROIT, July 15.—Patsy Donovan and his band of Speed Boys, after splitting even in their series with the Chicago White Sox, arrived here to-day. This afternoon they will give battle to the ferocious Tigers on their own grounds in one of the most important series of the season.

Hugh Hughey is elated over the showing of his team against the champion Athletics. The four straight victories which Messrs. Cobb, Crawford, Donovan and Mullin made possible have convinced the tow-headed leader that the Tigers will land the American League pennant this year.

The Red Sox are not in the least disturbed by the showing of the Tigers in their recent series with the men from the City of Brotherly Love and are confident of giving Jennings's crew a rude awakening.

Manager Donovan has been saving the speedy Joe Wood for to-day's game. During the past few weeks the Kansas cyclone has been going better than ever. The Tigers will find Wood a great deal harder proposition than they did Mack's crippled pitching staff.

The rest of the Red Sox nine are waiting anxiously to get a rap at the Tigers. They are sure that they will be equal to the task of taming Jenning's pennant chasers.

In today's game Manager Donovan will use the same lineup which played such havoc with the White Sox yesterday. Hap Mayers will continue to take care of the initial bag, while Clyde Engle will play second until Heinie Wagner returns to the fold. The other positions will be looked after by the same men who played them in the Chicago series.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Charley Herzog stole second and third in the fourth. Bill Sweeney got away with a theft of third in the same round.

Roger Bresnahan didn't have a single fielding chance. He did most of his work with his mouth.

McIvor, the Texas product who is acting as utility outfielder for the Cards appeared as pinch batter in the eighth and was set down on three straight strikes.

It was a cinch that the Rustlers were going to win that game, for the foe was held runless for three whole innings.

Bill Sweeney walked three straight times. He failed to get his almost daily hit, but scored two of his team's seven runs.

The Cardinals fully expected to make a clean sweep of that series and were grievously disappointed with the result of the final game. They will try to take out their spite on Brooklyn.

BOSTON YACHT CLUB CRUISE

A fleet of fifty yachts will start from Marblehead this afternoon at 5 o'clock on the first squadron run in the Boston Yacht Club's annual cruise to Boothbay Harbor, Me. This will be the longest run of the cruise, and was made so as to enable the fleet to make short runs to Winter Harbor, just beyond Bar Harbor, which is the destination of the fleet this year.

Thirty-four yacht owners have made entries with the regatta committee, and there are generally fifteen or more which join the fleet without having formally entered for the racing squadron runs. More yachts will join the fleet at Boothbay and Portland, and when the start is made from Boothbay Harbor on Tuesday it is expected the usual large squadron which this club shows in Eastern waters will be in evidence.

The itinerary of the cruise follows:

July 15, Saturday—Racing run, Marblehead to Boothbay Harbor.
July 18, Tuesday—Racing run, Boothbay Harbor to Seal Harbor.
July 19, Wednesday—Racing run, Seal Harbor to Stonington, in Deer Isle thoroughfare.
July 20, Thursday—Proceed at will, Stonington to Northeast Harbor.
July 21, Friday—Racing run, Northeast Harbor to Winter Harbor.
July 22, Saturday—Sail-off for class prizes. Fleet disbands.

The official entries follow:

SCHOONERS.

Shiyessa, Commodore Alfred Douglass; Taormina, W. S. Eaton; Adventuress, Joseph Cullivan; Roaring Bessie, M. C. Errismann.

SLOOPS AND YAWLS.

LAUNCHES.

The steam yacht Elizabeth, formerly the Jule, has been chartered by the regatta committee.

Commodore Alfred Douglass started with the Eastern Yacht Club fleet on its annual cruise, but returned early to Hull to fit out for the cruise of the Boston Yacht Club.

Prizes for the daily squadron runs have again been offered by Commodore Douglass, and as usual his selections for trophies are well worth winning. There is also a prize, offered by a member, to be known as the regatta committee trophy, for the yacht in any class making the best corrected time on all racing runs.

Rain or shine, there will be a game Monday in the Yung Amerika Malgumated National lege. This is the most authentic and interest piece of news in over two weeks. We had it handed to us direct from President Umpers. To quote him: "Something will have to be done to get these kids back on the job again and keep them out of mischief. So I have decided to make them start playing ball again, and this time I will see that they keep it up."

By to-morrow we will know just what two teams are to play and all will be peaceful again.

We understand that the same old umpire, "Socks," will be on the job again. We were talking to him yesterday and he told us that Mr. Umpers has raised his pay from three to five oranges a week. He is worth every orange that he will receive, as he is by far the best umpire that the league has ever had. So far as we know it had only one other, but that is not "Socks's" fault.

A little kid by the name of "Spareribs" Maloney tried to get Vice-President "Puggy" Mullane's goat yesterday by telling him that "Skinny" Shaner was to start an opposition league.

"Spareribs" was drawing on his imagination. There is no truth whatsoever in his story.

"Skinny" Shaner's best friend but one blew into town yesterday. His name is Fred and he is a traveling salesman.

He only gets into town three or four times a year, and every time he does he always calls on "Skinny's" sister.

According to "Skinny," Fred is the richest man in the world. Every time he meets "Skinny" he treats him to an ice cream soda.

One time he treated him to three, so "Skinny" says, and another time, according to our young friend, he gave him fifty cents just to keep out of the front parlor where he and "Skinny's" sister were sitting one evening looking at the pictures in the family album.

If You Had to Live It Over Again

By DOROTHY DIX

A Timely Discussion on Why Marriage Is so Often a Failure

HALF a dozen people, men and women, none of whom had found happiness in wedlock, were discussing the other day the why and wherefore of marriage being so often a failure.

"All of us," said one of the men, "have had our experiences. Doubtless we have all made mistakes, but if we had to go back and live our married lives over again, if we were in the same situation, and the same problem confronted us, how would we act? What wisdom have we acquired?"

"Not to marry at all," replied another man cynically. "Play celibacy straight across the board to win. That's the only tip on how to be happy, though married, that is worth a cent."

"Ah," breathed a woman, "but matrimony is the only game in the world in which the burnt child doesn't dread the fire! The minute death or the divorce court mercifully relieves a man or woman of a disagreeable wife or husband, the rescued party immediately plunges back into trouble by getting married again."

"That's true," observed the second woman, "when I have observed how brutes of husbands and shrews of wives seem to live forever just to torture the good and lovely women and men they are married to, I always account for it on the ground that Providence has gotten discouraged at trying to take care of people's matrimonial affairs. I can imagine the angel who has such matters in charge drawing a sign and saying: 'Oh, what's the use? If I take off that woman's husband with a cute little attack of appendicitis, she will be fool enough to marry the first man that asks her,' or 'It won't do a bit of good to run over that woman with an automobile, for her husband will marry again in six months some other woman who will henpeck him as badly as she does, and he would be just as miserable.'"

Varied Opinions

"Well," commented the third man, "all that I can say is that if matches are made in the other world, the factory is located in the brimstone territory."

"The one piece of wisdom that we all bring out of our matrimonial shipwreck," said the second woman, "is to avoid putting to sea with the shipmate we did."

"Ah!" exclaimed the first man, "but that is precisely the point I wish to make. Suppose that we did have to put out to sea with the same shipmate, suppose all the conditions were exactly the same, except that we had the experience that we have now, how would we navigate the matrimonial craft so as to keep it from going on the rocks? Could we prevent the catastrophe?"

"God knows," said one of the women, drearily.

"Yes. He knows—and perhaps we know also wherein we made our mistakes, wherein we were to blame, for the fault is ours, too, in some degree. No man and no woman is ever wholly to blame for a marriage being a failure. In some way every husband and every wife is responsible for the other's sin.

"For myself, I know that I never sit down before my own desolated hearthstone without putting dust and ashes on my head, and feeling that I did my part in wrecking our home. I did it ignorantly, unintentionally, blunderingly, but I did it in part, and I believe that if I had my married life to live over again, I could make it a success instead of the ghastly tragedy it has been.

"I married a young girl who was beautiful, gay and vivacious, fond of pleasure and excitement and amusement. She was a poor girl, reared in a small village. In all of her life she had never had a pretty gown, a jewel or any of the frills that women crave. Nor had she had any amusement. She had never been to supper in a restaurant, had never seen a play, never traveled fifty miles from the dull and sordid little town in which she lived.

He Didn't Know

"I knew all of this, of course, but I did not realize what it meant until after it was too late. That was my first mistake—not understanding the danger of what was doing. The girl I married was a woman who was famished for the gaieties and frivolities of life, and perhaps she was no more to be blamed for over-indulgence in them than the starving man is who kills himself by gorging himself on food if no hand restrains him.

"I was city bred. All my life I had had plenty of money to indulge my tastes. I was weary of society, tired of the theatre, restaurant life had long since palled upon me. When I married I wanted to settle down. I wanted the peace and quiet of a home.

"But this avid young creature was mad for the very things of which I was weary. She could not get enough of the glare and glitter of the cafes. She would have camped in a theatre lobby if she could. She danced her slippers to ribbons. Her reckless extravagance knew no bounds.

"I was cruelly disappointed in her. Her unappeasable desire for amusement seemed to me to show her not only soulless and heartless, but absolutely vulgar. At first I made frantic efforts to restrain her; I argued with her, pleaded with her, but without avail; and then, sorely wounded, I turned from her in pride and anger and let her go her own gait unchecked.

"That is where I made my mistake. I failed to protect her. We became one of those forlorn couples whose marriage is a mockery and who have nothing in common except the loathed chain which binds them together. We scarcely even met at meals, for she was generally dining out and going to some entertainment afterward, while I spent my evenings reading or working on some law case. Of course, I never saw her in the mornings, because she didn't get up till noon, and she spent much of the time away from home, in Europe, or at some of the fashionable resorts in this country.

"Naturally, the inevitable happened; that always happens when a young, beautiful and unmarried married woman ranges society alone. The other man appeared. There was a nasty scandal, and divorce, and the other night when I saw in a restaurant the woman who had been the little country girl I married she was haggard-eyed, over-dressed, with hard, painted lips and cheeks flushed with too much champagne.

"Hidden behind a palm, I looked at her for a long time without her seeing me, and I though that if I had my life to live over again, if I could go back to our bridal hour, that I could save her and save myself. If it were to do over again I would tread with her the wild world of gaiety. I would give her her fill of the pleasures that she had never had, and whose very novelty made them so entrancing. I would satiate her with theatres, dances, and cafes until she turned from them in disgust. I would guide her among the breakers, protect her, and perhaps she would turn at last back to me.

"For I sometimes think that the reason she apparently never wearied of gaiety was because, by the time the excitement of going about began to pall upon her, she thought that she had lost my love and had nothing to turn to, so she was bound to go on, and on, chasing ever more madly the will o' the wisp of pleasure.

"If I had it to do over again," said the first man in conclusion, "I'd drive with a lighter rein, and let her bolt until she tired herself out, and then maybe she'd settle down into the jog trot of married life."

"Life is full of regrets that one did not do the other way—especially with women," remarked the second man, harshly.

Eczema a Local Disease

According to the German school of medicine, eczema is a local disease, and not caused by bad blood. External treatment is, therefore, of the greatest curative value. This view is proven to be correct by the results following the external use of Cadum, the new skin remedy. Itching is stopped as soon as Cadum is applied, the skin heals quickly, and the disease disappears. Many other troubles besides eczema also yield readily to it, such as redness, pimples, rash, roughness, scaly skin, chafings, acne, sores, ulcers, eruptions, hives, tetter, itch, herpes, psoriasis, ringworm, itching piles, etc. It costs but 10 cents to buy a trial box of Cadum. Even the very poor can thus afford to use it. At all druggists.

The Vanity Box

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By ALICE STUYVESANT

THAT same year Tom and Rose, his wife, planted grape vines and honeysuckle and clematis to climb over the arbour, and all had flourished as if they were glad to encourage the young couple.

Now, the happiness and the creepers were seven years old together; the creepers gave a deep green shade to the arbour, and the happiness gave sunshine to the whole farm.

Poppet was a year younger than the arbour, and it was her favorite seat, as well as her mother's. The farmhouse standing on a hill, and the embowered pergola leading out from the front door, those sitting on the sheltered rustic seats could see wagons stop or pass at the gate. They could also see anyone coming up the path; and for a view they could look across a dip up to deep masses of forest.

Over the tops of trees rose the crown of a stone tower, built by the late Mr. Forestier's father as a viewpoint. From the balcony of the tower, reached by a winding stairway which ran outside, several counties could be seen, and an ocean of waving blue, with a silver glitter on the horizon that meant the sea; a famous view; but Mrs. Barnard much preferred her own homelike outlook from the arbour.

In the early days of her marriage, any one was allowed to go up into the tower; but tramps had taken advantage of its shelter, and Mr. Forestier had ordered it to be locked up. Only his widow, the Herewards, and the tenants of Riding Wood Farm had keys, so far as Rose knew. The Herewards because they were intimate friends as well as neighbours, and loved the view, and the Barnards because it was one of Tom's duties to look into the tower rooms now and then, and see that the place was kept in repair.

Before Poppet was born, Rose used to go up with him by moonlight sometimes, and hand in hand they would look out over the blue and silver world, telling each other that they were the happiest couple in it, as romantically as if they had been poets, instead of farmers.

But now, Mrs. Barnard, though just as happy and loving, took life a little more prosaically. That was why she preferred her own arbour and her own view and never went to the tower by moonlight or any other light.

"Mummy, here comes Craigie," chirped Poppet, looking up from her doll's blouse, and down through the pergola toward the gate.

"Does she? But you mustn't say Craigie. You must say Miss Craigie, or Miss Kate," the child's mother corrected her, as she transferred a pile of socks and stockings from her lap to the seat, preparatory to greeting the visitor.

"Why?" Poppet wanted to know, looking up with large, grave, brown eyes like her father's. "Everybody at the Moat calls her Craigie—except Edward, the footman, who's in love with her."

Little Pitcher

"Dear me, dear me, what large ears little pitchers have, to be sure," mumbled Rose Barnard, pressing her pink lips together to keep from smiling. "It's quite different at the Moat. There Kate is servant. Here she is a friend." And as by this time the object of the conversation had come well into view, Mrs. Barnard jumped up, holding out her hand.

"This is nice, Kate," said she. "All the more welcome from being a surprise."

"I just had to come to see you," exclaimed the young woman whom Poppet must not call "Craigie." "I haven't got long to stop, though. I expect that her ladyship will be home by half-past four or so. She and Sir Ian are lunching over at the Wood, with Mrs. Forestier, and I'd have slipped away before if I could, but I got into a fuss with Edward."

"Poor Edward! I shouldn't wonder if it was more your fault than his, Kate," laughed Mrs. Barnard. "I expect he was jealous, thinking how you've been away in Paris, perhaps flirting with some smart couriers in the hotel."

"It's none of his business if I flirt or not," said Kate Craigie. "I never promised myself to him."

"That's what makes him so wild," remarked Rose. He'd be quiet enough if you would." And she smiled at Kate, who was a handsome, well-made girl, with refined features, and the look which causes a young woman of her class to be called "very superior."

"That's partly it," Kate admitted. "But I can't make up my mind. Edward is awfully good looking, and I can't help liking him, but there's another thing I can't help, too. I can't help thinking it's silly to like him, and that he ain't the sort of math for me now.

"I could do a lot better, if I liked, and I tell him so, frankly. Why, he'd never have dared to pop the question to Liane, and he wouldn't to me, if I'd come to the house as her ladyship's maid. He'd have felt the difference between us then just as he would with Liane, even if he'd happened to have fancied her, which of course he never did.

"It's just because I was a parlourmaid when we first got to know each other that makes him feel himself on an equality."

The Equality Question

"Well, there's something I can't help thinking," said Mrs. Barnard. "And that is that all such talk about equality, and this or that one being above or below, is nonsense with folk in our station of life.

"What does it matter if a girl's a parlour-maid or a lady's maid, or whether a man's a valet or a footman? They're servants, and just on the same level in the eyes of those that's above us all, just as I suppose the whole world's on a level to Royalties."

"I don't know about Royalties, but Edward's got to imagining that her ladyship's heard what he wants of me, and is putting me up to the idea that it ain't suitable to my position. That was what he was fussing about to-day. He thinks that she set me against him, while we were in Paris."

"As if her ladyship would!" exclaimed Rose in good-natured scorn.

Kate flushed. "Oh, I suppose you don't believe she takes the same interest in me as she did in Liane."

"If she hadn't liked you, and thought well of you, she wouldn't have taken you from parlour-maid and trained you to be her own maid, instead of getting another French woman after poor little Liane disappeared so mysteriously," Rose consoled her.

"She must have liked me, and I'm sure I do my best to please her," sighed Kate. "But I could scream, sometimes, the way she says 'Liane used to do this, or that.' Why if Edward's jealous of other men with me, I'm sure I suffer just as much as he does, or more.

"It's my nature to be jealous. I can't help it. I want to be all in all to any one I'm with. And I'm jealous of Liane. Sometimes I feel just mad with jealousy. I could stop doing her ladyship's hair, and box her ears, when she says in that quiet voice of hers, 'Craigie, you haven't Liane's touch.'"

"Good gracious, Kate, I hope you don't burst out like that to any one but me!" gasped Mrs. Barnard, horrified at this lese majeste. "Any one would think you hated her ladyship, she who's so kind to every one."

"Sometimes I do hate her; sometimes I'd lie down and die for her, just according as she treats me," Kate persisted obstinately. "Her cold ways make me feel all on fire, often. Perhaps Edward feels like that about me. I hope he does. I like some one else to suffer.

"Hates Her Ladyship"

"And he hates her ladyship, sure enough, because he's sure it's her fault I'm off with him, since she took me on as maid in Liane's place."

"Poor Liane!" murmured Mrs. aBrnard. "I wonder if we'll ever know what's become of her."

"Her ladyship suspects," said Kate.

"Does she?" The wise woman's curiosity overcame prudence for a moment.

"She thinks—I would ask you never to tell, only I know you never do tell things. She thinks that Mr. Barr had something to do with Liane's disappearance."

"My heavens, Mr. Barr! And he's in love with Miss Verney, as every one knows!"

"Men are strange. You can't tell what they'll do."

"Silly! Yes you can—Mr. Barr doesn't seem like that. What put such an idea in her ladyship's head?"

"I don't know what put it into her head, though they do say that Liane used to be seen walking down to the steward's house, after twilight, more than once before she cleared out, nine or ten weeks ago. Her ladyship may have heard that, or she may have heard more, for all I can tell.

"But what I do know is, that the idea is in her head, and very strong, too. I've known it for some time, and for the best of reasons; because I've heard her say so to Sir Ian. Oh, I don't eavesdrop. I'm not a Frenchwoman, and I have no sly tricks! But I happened to come in and catch a bit of what they were saying, in the midst of a tremendous talk. They shut up in an instant, and her ladyship never dreamed I'd heard.

"I never spoke of it to any one before, but I felt I'd got the clue to all that's been going on underneath the surface, up at the Moat, for weeks past."

"You mean——"

"I mean I'm sure her ladyship tried to persuade Sir Ian to discharge Mr. Ian Barr. She could never bear the sight of him, anyhow, and if she'd had her way, Sir Ian wouldn't have taken him on as steward."

"But that was what every one thought so noble of Sir Ian! The young fellow was his uncle's son, and if the old gentleman hadn't quarrelled with him, would probably have left him a lot of money."

"What was the story exactly? I know it only in a mixed-up way."

"Why, old Sir Ian, the uncle of the present one, was wild, and, many say, wicked as a young man. Anyhow, he was an avowed atheist—a dreadful thing. He lived abroad in his youth, and Friars' Moat was shut up. In Italy or somewhere he married an opera singer, they say, who was as bad as himself.

"So they separated; then he came back to his own country, and she was supposed to have died—killed in an earthquake, which destroyed some Italian towns. He was visiting a friend in Ireland at the time, and in his wild way fell in love with a wonderfully beautiful peasant girl. They were married, and he brought her to Friar's Moat, where the county refused to call—he was disliked, anyhow, for his lawlessness and his atheism and his awful temper.

"Soon he tired of his wife, and when little Ian was a baby it was discovered that his Italian wife was alive and well after all—a cruel thing for the poor Irish girl! She reproached her husband something dreadful, they say—for the baby's sake—and he was so furious that he refused to give her more money than an Irish peasant could live upon.

"Hoping that he'd do something for the child, the unhappy creature took a tiny cottage nearby, and the wicked old man did have the decency to pay for the boy's schooling.

"When the little chap got old enough to hear the story, though, and of his father's meanness to the beautiful peasant mother, he wouldn't have another penny from him. And one day they met and there was an awful scene, for the boy inherited something of his father's wild temper.

"The story is that the old man struck him, for his 'impudence,' with a stick he carried; that the boy—only fourteen or so—wrenched it from him and threw it in his face. Of course that ended everything. Old Sir Ian disinherited the boy, to whom he meant to leave a few thousands.

"Young Ian wouldn't be called Hereward any more, as he had been. He took the name of Barr, which was his mother's family, and in one way or another he supported not only himself, but her till the time when our Sir Ian came into everything, on his uncle's death—the first wife being really dead by that time, too.

"Our Sir Ian didn't know the truth till he got here, having been away from England so much. Then, when he found out, he wanted young Ian Barr to accept all the money, for, of course, it was out of his power to do anything about the estate.

"Young Ian wouldn't have a shilling! But when he got to know his cousin a little he was persuaded to take the stewardship. No doubt it was partly for his mother's sake, so she should have more luxuries; though she died soon after, it would have been foolish as well as ungracious to throw the job over then."

What the Bell Buoy Said

By ADA PATTERSON

A short-winded swim out the harbor is a shabby old brown bell buoy. It careens uncertainly in wind and wave, but gives forth no uncertain tone. The rusty old bell, at the apex of its rusty old frame, utters hoarse, constant warning.

"Don't come too near me," peals the ancient bell. "I'm not so safe and commonplace as I look. I mark the edge of a dangerous shoal. There are rocks just behind me; dangerous rocks. I am here to warn you that it is so. Don't lift up your laughter against my voice. I am here to save you."

The wind takes up the last words of the bell and carries their intoned message about the wood-fringed island and out across the waters of the harbor. "To save you," it repeats. "To save you."

There are many sorts of buoys, as there are many sorts of persons—gay, newly painted bell buoys, challenging, in their barber-pole splendor, as rouged and penciled women who go forth upon the street at noon; modern buoys that signal their message by flashes of light, like the men and women we know who are so modern that they have no background of yesterday, but belong to to-day, with a mortgage upon them by to-morrow; light buoys, that toss as inconsequently upon the waves as some folk skim the surface of life's meanings; staid buoys, that rest firmly upon some rocky level, as serious folk who take life heavily—but this bell buoy is plain, old fashioned, reliable, like the dear, prosy persons who love and advise us.

Thick as the rust on the bell is the silver on their heads; quaint as the outworn fashion of the old bell their garb; husky their voices as the bell's own; as solemn and persistent as its warning theirs.

The bell utters its warning in all kinds of weather, at all seasons. As consistently and constantly the old folk speak their words of counsel.

To girls they say in the same endless iteration: Don't give your heart without your hand, nor your hand without your heart. Don't. Don't. Don't. There are shoals ahead. There are rocks on which your marriage ship will go to pieces." Or, "There is disgrace ahead. Shame, a broken heart; death, or a broken life. Don't. Don't. Don't." Like the rusty notes of the old bell we hear their "Don't. Don't. Don't." Young girls shrug their shoulders, toss their heads, say harsh things about the reiterated words and the speaker; but if they do not heed then they remember afterward: "Don't give your heart without your hand, nor your hand without your heart. Don't. Don't. Don't."

Waste of time is worse than waste of wealth. Don't waste your time: It is the stuff of which life is made. "Don't, don't, don't," warn the human buoy bells. "Don't. Don't. Don't."

"Don't waste anything," the bell goes on intoning. "Nor money, nor talents, nor emotions. Don't. Don't. Don't.

"Life is no pleasure chase, no easeful condition. It is a struggle—a struggle from the cradle to the grave," warn the human buoy bells. "Ha! Ha!" ring out answering voices, the voices of youth. "How often have I heard that. How tiresome it is. Copy-book wisdom. Ha! Ha!"

"You cannot find happiness by seeking it. You cannot; you cannot," say the human buoy bells over and over again and many times. "You find it only where and when you are not looking for it—in the plain path of duty. It is true. It is true."

Careless boatmen, because they forget to listen to the hoarse voice of the buoy bell, have died upon the rocks. Thoughtless men and women have expiated in tears, in heartbreak, in the blackness of failure and defeat, their deafness to the seasoned wisdom of those buoy bells of humanity—the old.

SWEET SIXTEEN.

"I am sweet sixteen," she said.

"And never been kissed, I presume?" he retorted.

"No indeed," she replied. "I am sweet sixteen and have never smoked a cigarette."

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

BEFORE YOUR LOVER, CLAUDE ECLAIRE ARRIVES I WILL FLOAT WITH YOU TO SHORE, HELPLESS AS I AM. ONCE IN MY POWER YOU WILL BE FORCED TO BE MY WIFE, ROSAMOND!
UNHAND ME, CUR DESMOND, I HATE YOU I LOVE ONLY CLAUDE. YOU MAY HAVE ESCAPED THE WRECK ALLRIGHT, BUT MY HERO WILL ARRIVE IN TIME TO STOP YOUR FLIGHT TO SHORE, YOU FIEND!
HURRAH FOR THE NEW GOVERNOR
SAVED! THE ROCKET HAS HIT THE VILLAIN'S HAND AND HE HAS RELEASED ME
AHA! A STEAMER TRUNK FROM THE WRECK I'LL FLOAT IN AND FOIL THE FIREWORKS
I MUST HANG ON TO THIS TRUNK TILL MY LOVER ARRIVES!
HA, HA!
CURSES! I'M FOILED, I FORGOT ABOUT THE LID. CURSES!
CLAUDE
IN THE NICK OF TIME TO SAVE MY ROSAMOND AND CAPTURE DESMOND!
SIT ON IT TIGHT DARLING, AND I'LL SWING ALONG AND STEER IT TO SHORE. I HAVE A FINE DEATH PLANNED FOR THE VILLAIN
CLAUDE, YOU ARE A REAL HERO AND SOON AS THE CUR IS EXECUTED I WILL MARRY YOU

Floating along lashed to the broken mast, Desperate Desmond clings to the proud, but tender, Rosamond. He believes that he can baffle Claude and compel the helpless girl to marry him. Little does he realize the heroic natures of the lovers. No danger can daunt Claude and nothing could ever induce Rosamond to be disloyal to her hero. True to death is her motto.

Even in far-off Borneo they sometimes celebrate to honor the coming of a new Governor. Rockets shoot into the air, and as they swish down again Desmond is exposed to a new danger. A big stick strikes him on the hand and the blow forces him to release his grip on Rosamond. Gladly she feels herself float out of the scoundrel's clutches.

The falling sticks splash into the water all around the villainous Desmond and he begins to fear for his miserable life. As he is bound to the piece of wooden mast he cannot dive below the surface, so he looks around for some shelter. Ah, a floating trunk! It is easy to float into it and thus be protected from the new danger. Rosamond, too, finds the trunk a useful support in the water.

Desmond does not notice that the lid of the trunk hung below the surface. Not that he would have paid any attention to it if he had. How could such a trifling thing involve the liberty that he prizes so dearly? You can't, yourself, see how the fact matters at all, even with the aid of the artist's pictures. However, the presence of a large fish frightened by the falling rockets may indicate something.

Sure enough, the big fish does play a part in this drama of love and hate. As it shoots through the water the fish collides violently with the lid of the trunk and turns the whole thing over. Naturally, the lid closes upon the scoundrel, and the beauteous Rosamond, as she clings to the trunk, rejoices over the capture of the arch-villain. She knows that Claude will be there to aid her as quickly as he can arrive on the scene.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond from within the trunk, putting on an air of bravado that he does not feel. Claude and Rosamond at last have their enemy dead to rights, all boxed up like an express package. The floating trunk turns out to be a trap for the desperate one and Claude ponders over what should be done with him. There are many things to do with an enemy so discomfited. To-morrow we shall see which the artist has selected.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

GUSTAV LINGG, wireless operator on the Laminian, goes ashore while his ship is loading at her New York dock and loses his way in a dense fog which comes in from the harbor and envelopes the city. On a side street he meets a beautiful girl whom he has never seen before, but who calls him by name. "I want to talk to you," she says, "I must talk to you—alone."

Overcome by shyness, he stares boobishly at her for a moment and then turns and flees. He goes a long way and finally, just as a ferry whistle tells him that he is nearing the river, he enters a narrow street, only to find his way blocked by a cab, a cab with an open door.

In the cab sits the woman from whom he had fled. "I waited to warn you," she says, and makes him enter the cab.

"Of what?" he asks, as the cab starts.

"Not to sail on the Laminian."

He asks why not and she replies that it will not be safe. He apparently doubts her and she pleads with him. Finally she asks him to kiss her, and as he draws away from her, throws her arms around his neck. In the midst of his struggles, the cab stops, the door is open, and a man drags him into the street. A crowd gathers and a policeman appears, who begins clubbing his assailant. Then another man appears, who slugs off the policeman and puts the dazed operator back into the cab, calling out to the driver:

"To the police station, straight!"

The man who had attacked the operator then tells the bewildered policeman that the man who has just driven off in the cab with Lingg is one of Wilkie's men and that the woman is also in the secret service.

The scene changes to the deck of the steamship Laminian. A big shouldered man in a raincoat wants to send a message, but the operator tells him the wireless apparatus is out of order and that he can't do any sending until he fixes it.

The captain calls to the operator to hurry up and get his apparatus in shape. Through the mist can be seen an approaching warship.

THE REASON

If you have been drinking some tasteless substitute for coffee—

And feel out of sorts.

Mind sluggish.

Nerves on edge.

Stomach protesting.

Spirits low.

Stop it—and drink coffee.

Not harsh, poorly grown, half-ripe coffee—that kind is as bad as the substitute.

But coffee made from the big, ripe, rich, juicy berries—the kind that cheers and soothes and doesn't harm one man in a thousand.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

A MUFFLED crash and clatter of sound echoed out of the closed station; a simultaneous kiss and crackle of broken noise came from the masthead.

It was the wireless operator at last working his key. It was the Hertzian waves, erupting from the fended coils, winging their way with the speed of light out through the loneliness of the rain fogged afternoon.

Then came a space of silence, interrupted by the sudden appearance of the operator, still in his shirt-sleeves, with his coat held over his head like a hood. He strode to the bridgegate, where he was met by the waiting captain.

Together they bent over a sheet from a tinted form-pad. Then the hooded figure hurried back to the station, and the slam of a door punctuated his disappearance from sight.

The man in the raincoat turned back to the battleship, and stood thoughtfully regarding the bursts of foam on her plunging cutwater and the intermittent shower of spray as she rose and dipped in the cross-swell.

Through the engine-room skylight behind him came the call of subterranean voices, the busy clangor of iron scraping on iron, the quick slam of furnace doors, magnified in the open shaft-head to sounds of titanic proportions.

As he stood there a deck steward mounted the brass-plated stairway, carrying a tray with coffee-cake and steaming cups of tea.

The man at the rail wheeled about quickly at the unexpected sound of a voice so close behind him. He declined the proffered refreshment bruskly and swung back to his earlier position, staring out at the battleship.

The steward took up his tray and passed on to the operator's door, where, adroitly balancing on one foot, he tapped on the panel with the other.

The door opened, and this time the white glare of the electric light shone along the wet deck. The man at the rail, twisting his head, without any betraying movement of the body, succeeded in getting a more satisfactory glimpse of the room.

The Operator

Behind the door swung a curtain of soiled denim, partly withdrawn. Squatting on a canvas camp-chair before his unpainted work-table was the operator.

His wireless helmet-receiver, or "set," was clasped over his ears and held close to the bent head by a chaplet of glimmering metal. Against each "receiver" the operator pressed a white handkerchief, to shut away outside noises.

His face was lean, clear-cut, touched with vigor. It was too vital and youthful in texture to be called leathery, though it was sunburnt to what seemed almost a coffee-color, contrasting strangely with the ruddiness of the open-weathered ship's officers about him.

He had, too, a touch of the ascetic in the high brow and wide cheek-bones, his leanness of jowl giving one the impression of generous reservoirs of energy greedily and continuously drained by some ever-adventuring thirst for activity.

Though his eyes were impersonally studious and abstracted, there was a redeeming line or two of humor about the mouth. His hands were long and bony and slender, with something persistently scholar-like about them, for all their scarred and calloused and sinewed strength.

This impression was further borne out by the restless, unco-ordinated, and at times, almost wolf-like restlessness of the spare and nervous body as he passed back and forth in the narrow cabin. There seemed something unsubjugated in his long strides, as though he and his great length of limb had not yet grown used to confined places. This sense of an achieved repression was strengthened by the touch of audacity about his wide and clear-seeing eyes as he circled his room or sat sprawlingly before his instruments—of an audacity tempered with intelligence.

He nodded cheerfully enough to the steward, however, at the sight of the coffee-cake and the steaming tea. Then he turned back to his responder. The steward, leaving his tea and cake on the seat of a broken-armed steamer-chair, went on his way, and the deck was again deserted.

Told to Shut Up

"Why aren't you getting the Princeton, there?" Captain Yandel once more demanded from the bridge-gate. It was plain to see his feeling for the new operator was not an overkindly one.

The new operator showed his head round once corner of the stateroom.

"I'll try again!"

Once more came the hiss and rattle and crackle of the spark, and once more the lean and sun-tanned face appeared round a corner of the stateroom.

"He's busy talking to the navy yard!"

"To what?"

"To the navy yard."

"What'd he tell you?"

The new operator hesitated for a moment or two before answering. His singularly quiet eyes were resting on Captain Yandel's nose, for it was a remarkable nose, something between a cardinal and magenta color, stippled with the brighter hues of countless little broken veins.

"He told me to shut up, and cut out!" he answered at last, editing the irate officer's blasphemy out of the message.

The passenger in the raincoat fell to pacing the open deck. He stopped once or twice, quite casually, to glance in at the wireless apparatus.

Keep Cool

FOLKS are easily stampeded,
Just when all their sense is needed;
That's a fact by all conceded
As a universal rule.
If you meet the situation,
Give it your consideration,
Show no silly perturbation,
Just keep easy, calm and cool.

When your hands and arms are waving,
When your tongue is loudly raving,
When, in short, you are behaving
Like a perfect bloomin' fool,
Matters never can be mended.
Too much effort is expended.
Use your wits as they're intended,
Just keep easy, calm and cool.

Don't be foolishly elated,
Don't with pride become inflated,
Don't get mad and irritated,
All your passions strictly school;
Try to hold yourself together,
Don't let go and snap your tether,
Even in the present weather,
Just keep easy, calm and cool.

Anty Drudge—"You needn't drive your husband from home, with such disagreeable smells. Buy Fels-Naptha soap, do away with scalding water, and boiling clothes, and soapy smells, and—enjoy your husband's company."

Too many household cares to give over a whole day to the week's wash!

Why should all day Monday be wash-day? Why shouldn't just Monday MORNING be "wash morning?"

And it CAN BE if you use Fels-Naptha soap. Because Fels-Naptha is made to do the work FOR you. A soap that DISSOLVES the dirt. You soap the clothes and place them in cool or lukewarm water for thirty minutes. And you then find that only light rubbing is needed to make the wash ready for the line.

Whether white goods, flannels, woolens or colored goods, you have got the very best washday results possible, and with the least effort. And because you have used cool or lukewarm water, your hands are smooth and soft.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

MARKET SLOW, THOUGH FIRM

STATE STREET, July 15.—Closing—The same listless tone which has prevailed for several days characterized to-day's market, and only 53,300 shares were traded in.

Though the average closing was a sixteenth lower than yesterday, there was a strong tone throughout the list, and few selling orders were on the market. What selling there was came from the professional element on the floor and had very little effect, considering the effort made to depress prices.

Western Union was the feature of strength showing a point advance. Canadian, Chesapeake and Brooklyn showed gains and Steel was unchanged. The buying in Chesapeake and St. Louis and San Francisco was said to be for Hawley interests.

In the local market the only feature was the continued activity and demand for American Telephone and also for listed bonds. Coppers were more stagnant than for some time and everyone seemed to be waiting the outcome of the Calumet merger.

The Boston Curb Exchange has listed for trading commencing July 18, 12,500 shares additional Live Oak Development Co., and 325,000 shares Lion Hill Consolidated Mines.

MURRAY TO FIGHT BOSTON PORT BILL

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Representative William F. Murray will hold up in the House the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge providing for the changing of the official name of the Port of Boston and Charlestown to the Port of Boston. This bill passed the Senate. Mr. Murray will not permit this measure to go through the House until he has felt the sentiment in his district and if he finds the Charlestown people do not mind he will urge the passage of the bill. If they do object, however, he will fight it.

RESCUE 21 DURING CONEY ISLAND FIRE

NEW YORK, July 15.—Twenty-one persons narrowly escaped death early to-day in a fire which destroyed the amusement structure at Coney Island housing the Tunnels of Love, and which for a time threatened to spread and cause a repetition of the recent Dreamland disaster. Firemen and policemen finally rescued the imprisoned inmates who occupied apartments on the second floor of the building. Many of them were women.

NEW CLEW IN LAKE MYSTERY

prayer. Relatives of the dead girl brought some flowers that were laid on her coffin. She was buried in Newton Cemetery.

Sister Breaks Down.

At the cemetery Miss Gertrude Carroll, the sister of the dead girl, broke down and sobbed violently. She became so hysterical in her grief that she had to be assisted to her carriage. Miss Mildred Groth, another relative, also sobbed in sorrow for the dead girl.

The Rev. Mr. Noyes had accepted the belief of Medical Examiner West that the girl killed herself, although there could be found no reason for it.

"Miss Carroll was a quiet girl," said the clergyman, "and not conspicuous in her church work. She was of a happy disposition and was well liked. It is apparently one of those strange cases where a girl takes her life without any specified cause. It may have been that a combination of mental incidents worked in such a manner that she acted impulsively."

Could Have Procured a Boat.

It was reported at first that it would have been impossible for a stranger to get a boat for a row on the lake, but an investigation last evening showed that a boat could have been procured.

Miss Carroll's friends declare that if there had been anything in the girl's life that would have caused her to kill herself that she would have probably left a letter explaining what it was, because she had never intimated that she would do such an act.

The most probable theory of the girl's death, her friends say, is that she met a young man friend and went for a row on the lake, being very fond of boating. If this is the case, who was the young man?

The fact that no bruises or indications of a struggle with any one were found on the girl does not prove by any means, it has been pointed out, that the girl was not the victim of an accident on the water or of carelessness such as the survivor of such a tragic incident would not care to talk.

Had Been Despondent.

While Medical Examiner West and other officials ridicule the idea of murder and say the case is clearly one of suicide, the dead girl's relatives are inclined to wonder why no move is being made to investigate the theory of an accidental drowning, to remove the stigma, if nothing else, from Elsie's name.

Girl friends of Elsie Carroll, however, say that of late she had been noticeably despondent and had intimated she would drown herself in Crystal Lake. They try to explain her despondency by the fact that she was temporarily out of employment, the Thorpe mill in Highlandville, in which she had been working as an overstitcher for a year, having shut down without notice two weeks ago. It was expected to reopen, however, next Monday.

Elsie Carroll was a girl of moods. She was ambitious and she chafed under the circumstances of her life.

Girl Almost Alone.

Inquiries at the Groth home on Lansing road, where Miss Carroll has lived for several years, reveal the fact that the young girl was practically alone in the world. Her mother died when Elsie was an infant. Seven years ago her father went West, leaving her to the care of the Roths, who are second cousins. Her only sister, a woman twenty years older than herself, lives alone in a furnished room on Concord square and works in Boston.

Although they saw each other last Sunday for the last time, the elder Miss Carroll admits she knows very little about Elsie's personal life.

"I know nothing about her personal habits and tastes. You will have to go to Mrs. Groth to find that out. She knows lots more about my sister than I do," said Miss Carroll. It was on the Newton Boulevard car, coming back to Boston from the dead girl's home. Just at the moment, the car swung around a curve, coming into sudden view of Crystal Lake. A shiver went through Miss Carroll's body, and she bowed her head in her hands for several minutes, overcome by the sight of the silent implacable body of water. When she was able to speak, Miss Carroll continued:

"It is all a terrible mystery, and my mind is in such a dazed state I cannot think consecutively."

DEMAND FACTS OF WICKERSHAM

WASHINGTON, July 15.—After secret consideration of charges made by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that Attorney General Wickersham deliberately permitted the statute of limitations to run against agents of the Alaska syndicate who defrauded the Government by perjury to the extent of $50,000, the House Committee on Judiciary has determined to report favorably a resolution of inquiry offered by Delegate Wickersham.

The resolution would call upon the Attorney-General to furnish the House with all documents, affidavits and testimony in his possession relating to an affidavit submitted to him more than a year ago and sworn to by H. J. Douglas, former auditor of the Alaska syndicate in 1908.

Delegate Wickersham startled the committee when in executive committee he produced a copy of an affidavit relating to an alleged criminal act committed by Captain D. H. Jarvis of the Alaska syndicate and John H. Bullock of the John J. Sesnon Coal Company of Nome. Jarvis was once prominent in the revenue cutter service and committed suicide in Seattle June 22, the day after the introduction of the Wickersham resolution calling for production of the papers in the case.

Photographs of Evidence.

Through connivance of these men it was charged that the government was defrauded on coal contracts and that evidence to that effect was permitted to remain unacted upon in the Attorney-General's office for more than a year until the limitation expired last May.

Delegate Wickersham furnished the committee with photographic copies of a letter by an attorney for the Alaska syndicate to Jarvis admitting the expenditure of money to control government witnesses in the Harvey murder trial in 1908, wherein an agent of the Alaska syndicate was accused of murdering laborers employed by rival interests during the construction of a railroad in Alaska. A photograph of an expense account for $1,188.40 for M. H. Morrisey, employed by the syndicate, it is alleged, to entertain government witnesses and jurymen in that connection was also submitted to the committee. This evidence Delegate Wickersham asserted was likewise in the possession of the Attorney-General.

Delegate Wickersham urged on the judiciary committee the Douglas affidavit involving the representatives of the Northwestern Commercial Company, one of the Alaska syndicate concerns, and the Sesnon Coal Company.

Demanded Prosecutions.

"On May 24, 1910," he said, "I sent to Attorney-General Wickersham a copy of the affidavit, calling his attention to the fact that the government had been defrauded of $50,000 by perjury and a combination of these two corporations in the sale of coal to the government for military posts in Alaska. I asked him to make an investigation and prosecute those people for the crime committed in that transaction. I received a letter of acknowledgement May 31, 1910, and we had considerable further correspondence, and on June 13, 1911, more than a year later, I received a letter from the Attorney-General stating that the statute of limitation had expired."

"What do you mean by the Alaska syndicate?" Chairman Clayton inquired.

"I refer to the Alaska syndicate composed of J. Pierpont Morgan, the Guggenheim brothers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Jacob H. Schiff and Graves."

CHRISTY CLUB GIRLS HOSTS OF LUCKY MEN

Laying aside telephone receivers and forgetting for the time being all thoughts of the switchboards, ear rests, keys, circuits and toll calls, twenty young women telephone operators, members of the Christy Club, will hold a banquet at the United States Hotel, Beach street, this evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. They have invited twenty young men, most of whom are also connected with the telephone company, and have arranged for a musical program by entertainers of exceptional ability. Sadie Kane, Hanna Lawley and Pauline Schaffer are to give a duet. They will be accompanied on their musical journey by a pianist and cornetist. Anna Hennessey is scheduled to sing "My Hero" and "Sweet Adeline." Pauline Schaffer will be toastmistress. The committee of arrangements includes Miss Sadie Kane, president of the club; Miss Hanna Lawley, recording secretary, and Pauline Schaffer, treasurer.

Using Big Letters or Other Forms of Emphasis in Writing Editorials, Et Cetera, Is a Bad Habit Justly Criticised

Like Profanity in Conversation, It Is a Substitute for Thought Properly and Forcefully Expressed.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

Sometimes, in these editorials, you see words written in letters bigger and blacker than the other words. For instance, we say of a thing that it is useless extravagance AND STUPID.

A reader asks us why we do this, and if there is any reason for it. This reader says: "I don't like your use of capital letters in your editorials. To have a word printed suddenly in big letters is like having a man shriek suddenly in the middle of a conversation. You can write plainly enough and well enough without that kind of false emphasis. I see no reason for it. Will you not discontinue it?"

All artificial emphasis, as a rule, IS useless, and in bad taste.

We ought to discontinue the use of capitals in this column. We probably shall not do so, because we seek in that way to make a thing seem impressive. Using big letters when you write is something like using profanity when you speak. You get some kind of emphasis anyhow, if it is only in the sound and not in the idea.

Of course, emphasis, or very strong meaning, depends upon the effect produced in the brain of the man who reads what is written. The world has long used and long adapted itself to ARTIFICIAL emphasis. The orator yells or weeps at the critical moment—that is like using capital letters or italics. And the clergyman pounds the pulpit sometimes very hard with his fist when he is telling what you ought to do to escape Satan. That pounding with the fist is like using exclamation points in writing.

Unfortunately, all bad habits are rapidly imitated, good ones not. Since we began writing editorials with false type emphasis, many years ago, many young and old people have imitated that bad habit. They could stop if they would; we wish that THEY would.

We shall stop if we find that we can, but we don't expect to be able to stop. (You know the story of the guineapigs.)

Once in a great while, but only once in a very great while, artificial emphasis in type might be reasonable and desirable.

For instance, suppose that you talk at first about Chang, the Chinese giant, who was more than eight feet tall, and then you talk about Bismarck, the German Chancellor, who was also a very big man, running up far above six feet in height.

You would say of Chang, the Chinese giant, "He is a great big man," and you would express your meaning exactly. You would say and mean to say that Chang is a big man physically, a great big man.

On the other hand, if you wrote of Bismarck, broad-shouldered and heavy as he was, and called him "a great big man," you would not express all of your meaning. You would merely say that he was big in body.

But you would WANT to differentiate between the word GREAT and the word BIG.

Therefore, probably, you would follow our meretricious style of using type and say that Bismarck was "a GREAT big man." In other words, the Chinese giant would be a great big man, whereas Bismarck would be a GREAT big man, a very different kind of a big man.

But generally speaking, using big type is a defect, a nuisance, and we apologize for it. And if we CAN, we shall stop it.

The Legislature Has Passed a Good Milk Bill

The Ellis milk bill has been passed by the Legislature. It is a GOOD bill, for it puts under the supervision of the State Board of Health the inspection of both the production and sale of milk. It will STANDARDIZE and systematize milk inspection, which now varies with the efficiency and standard of the various local boards throughout the State.

Those who have opposed the bill assert that it will raise the price of milk. Yet the experience of Springfield, under very strict inspection, does NOT sustain this contention.

But if it should raise the price of milk slightly, it will lower the cost of diptheria, scarlet fever and typhoid fever tremendously and it will permit a greater number of infant children TO LIVE.

To oppose this bill because it might increase the cost of milk a fraction of a cent, is almost like weighing atoms against life itself.

The AMERICAN believes that the State should provide pure milk if the cost of producing and distributing it were doubled and the State were obliged to pay the difference.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

LENGTH OF TUNNELS

Editor AMERICAN:

The opening of the Hoosac tunnel to electric trains marks a forward step in American railroading and affords an opportunity for some interesting comparisons.

The longest tunnel in the world is the Simplon tunnel, extending from near Brigue, Switzerland, to a point near Iselle, Italy, passing through the Alps mountains for a distance of twelve and one-quarter miles. This tunnel is absolutely straight troughout, except for short distances at its terminal.

Hoosac tunnel is the only one in America which is in any way comparable with the great Alpine tunnel. It is four and three-quarters miles in length. This is under the Hoosac mountains, a spur of the Green mountains.

The subways of the city of New York are, of course, longer, though of a different character. There is twenty-one miles of tunnel for the purpose of transporting the electric trains; this does not include the tunnels under the two rivers. The new Croton aqueduct tunnel, which supplies water to the city of New York, is an excavation more than thirty-three miles in length.

OBJECTS TO CONVERTIBLES.

Editor AMERICAN:

I am not ordinarilly a kicker and personally am not interested directly in the matter herein mentioned, but I wish you would consider during the hot weather the seeming lack of judgment of the Elevated people in putting into service on such a line as the Mattapan route the new box cars known as convertible. This line, with one exception (that of the Columbia road line) is the only one by which passengers can reach the cars for the Blue Hill Reservation, which is especially on many seekers of recreation as any spot in holidays and Sundays the mecca of as Boston, to say nothing of Franklin Park, and I wish you could see the mass of sweltering humanity stuffed into these sweat-boxes of cars with midship seats not large enough to hold two adults in comfort. It would make him envy a ride on an open truck. I think, considering the season, the company might have used some judgment in originating such transportation. It is cruelty to animals to run such cars in hot weather.

The Transit Settlement

From the Boston Common.

THE swift and general uprising of public opinion in Boston against the Boston Elevated's fifty-year lease proposals measures an advance in the community spirit justifying a good deal of satisfaction. Here was an instance in which Boston, for once, was not inert. Aristocrat and proletarian vied with each other in notifying the General Court that such a seizure of power for a private interest was not to be.

Even the press of Boston did right well, its past considered. How much of its unexampled show of public spirit was due to the protest against its usual servility represented by the establishment of The Common, we leave to others to guess. Whatever the explanation, the exhibit itself has been most gratifying, and we trust that it registers a durable advance. Incidentally we pause here to pay tribute to the "Boston AMERICAN," which claims and proves priority over the "Post" in sounding the tocsin, though there is glory enough for all.

The settlement arrived at reflects creditably upon the Public Franchise League, the sturdy pioneer champion of the public's interest; upon the Governor and Legislature, and likewise in no small measure upon the management of the Elevated, which this time saw and sensed the significance of the public's determination not to be unfairly used. Even the West End stockholders will in due season doubtless be consoled to have the transportation problem in Boston put upon a basis of acceptable solution for a considerable time to come.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Pa as a Hero

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HEVINGS, sed Pa wen he caim hoam from the offis last nite, what awful wether this is. I doant think I ever felt the heat worse since I was a stoker on the good ship Oshun Queen, Pa sed.

Stay whare you are, Bobbie, sed Pa, I doant want any ice water, I am perfeckly normal. I was speaking of a grate adventure wich I onst had, a adventure that I thought I had toald yure mother about a long time ago. A poem was rote about it onst, sed Pa. It began

'Twas on Lake Erie's broad ex-pants
One (1) brite mid-summer day,
The gallant steamer Oshun Queen
Swept proud-ly on her way.

Oh, Pa, I sed, I remember that poem, I learned it & reesited it at skool the first year I was big enuff to speek a peece. But the teecher sed to me that this happened forty years ago, & you are only forty yeers old now. How cud you have helped Mister Maynard to steer that burning ship to shore

Yure teecher was rong, sed Pa. The incident happened only twenty years ago. I recall it all now, sed Pa, the whole terribul seen stands out like a cameo. John Maynard caim up to me & sed say, old pal, this ship is on fire & it is up to me to pick a comrade to help me steer it safe to the neerest shoar. After looking oaver the whole ship, sed Mister Maynard, I have desided that you are the only man on board that has the necessary strength & currage.

Well, sed Pa to Ma & me, to maik a long story short, he picked me to help in his brave task, & history relates how the two of us stood the gaff like the true heeroes we was, & how we steered that ship rite to the shoar and let all the ladies and children get off the boat first, then the men. John Maynard, bless his gallant hart, was the only man killed, Pa sed. I wanted to taik his place at the wheel, but he looked at me with his generous New England eyes & sed No, pal, you will be a grate man sum day, the world must not lose a man like you. The world must have you & the grate werk that you are soon to do.

Joys and Glooms

ONE of the happiest conceptions of the year is that of Powers, the cartoonist, with his jolly Joys and grouchy Glooms which he has just created in his new series of inimitable cartoons in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Powers has the whole United States laughing with him—not at him. Then after we laugh we sometimes sigh there is so much dogged truth in the pictures.

The idea of the Glooms and Joys is passing into the current coin of language, and will soon be legal tender wherever English she is spoke.

The real fact is that Powers has seized upon a great scientific fact and popularized it for busy people.

The scientists have told us that man's body is a battleground between the forces of life and those of dissolution. When the friendly germs are in the majority we are in health. When the germs of death and dissolution are in the ascendency we are slated for the toboggan.

Dr. J. H. Tilden of Denver tells us that the germs of typhoid as well as the germs of tuberculosis are found in most healthy bodies. The proposition is simply to keep the malignant germs in the minority, and then they cause no trouble. What we want is resiliency, or resisting power, and so long as we have this resisting power we fight off misery, woe and disease.

The friendly germs are fighting for us, millions of them are on our side, and a happy, exuberant, hopeful, healthful, merry attitude is evolving and breeding them. While, on the other hand, depression, misery, hate, the thought of revenge, jealousy and fear evolve and breed the germ of gloom or the malevolent bacteria.

Powers shows us pictures of the marching Glooms, and then at other times come the dancing, prancing, airy, fairy, frolicking Joys.

So surrounding every one are the Joys and Glooms. When the Glooms get in the ascendant we are ripe for the other cone, the referee in bankruptcy, the hurry-up wagon and the booby hatch.

When the Joys are in the majority we are making money, making friends, working, hoping, dreaming beautiful dreams, and all the time making the world better because we are here.

From India comes to us the idea of the aura. The idea is that around every individual is a peculiar atmosphere. He himself forms this atmosphere through his mental attitude. The aura is supposed to be seen by the adept; but we all feel it, and everybody realizes it. At certain times a beautiful rose tint surrounds the individual. At another time the aura is freighted with dark forebodings, unrest, suspicion; and then to be in the presence of such a one is to be depressed and cast down. Here we get another aspect of the same great psychological fact of the Joys and Glooms.

So Powers, the joker, is not only a great cartoonist, but he is also a great philosopher.

What we want to do is to get rid of the grouch and give the Glooms the go by so the Joys can come marching in with their microscopic brass band and fill the aura with hope, courage, animation, ambition and love.

When the Joys travel with us nothing is difficult and everything is beautiful.

Success to Brother Powers. He is helping the world to kibosh the Glooms through making them supremely ridiculous with their whiskers and big, bandit, opera bouffe hats.

Any man who insists on going through the world with a bodyguard of Glooms is a monkey's hind foot; while he who cultivates the Joys is a Wisenheimer and will never lack for friends, money, love and all that makes for success and happiness.
